1 P R O C E E D I N G S.

3 THE COURT: On the record in 25AC-CC09120, Jake
4 Maggard versus State of Missouri.

5 I have Matthew Gordon, Jon Hawley and Tori
6 Schafer.

7 For the Defense, I have Louis Capozzi, John 8 Patton, Patrick Sullivan.

9 And the Intervenor, I have Marc Ellinger.

10 MR. ELLINGER: And Stephanie Bell, Judge.

11 THE COURT: Oh, I'm sorry.

12 MR. ELLINGER: Not enough chairs.

13 MR. SCHIMD: Your Honor, Jon Schmid is here on 14 behalf of Plaintiffs as well.

15 THE COURT: Okay. Anybody else?

16 John Schimd?

17 MR. SCHIMD: Yes.

18 THE COURT: We're here for a bench trial today?

19 MR. GORDON: We do, Your Honor. And the parties 20 have submitted a couple of stipulations for the Court's 21 benefit. So first was a joint stipulation of facts and 22 exhibits that was filed the other day. And then 23 yesterday the parties submitted an additional 24 stipulation regarding pretrial proceedings.

25 And the parties have -- as part of that second

1 stipulation, the parties have agreed to that nobody is 2 intending to call a witness unless except for rebuttal
3 purposes. So I think we can proceed with trial on the 4 basis of the joint stipulations of facts and exhibits.

5 And so I think the trial today will consist 6 largely of argument about relying on those facts and 7 exhibits, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: I don't have yesterday's stipulations
9 yet pulled through the system. Do you-all have a copy 10 of that or it's just --

11 MR. GORDON: I can read it in to the Court, if 12 that would be helpful. I don't believe we have a 13 paperwork copy. My apologies.

14 THE COURT: Is it real long?

15 MR. GORDON: It's not real long.

16 THE COURT: Sure, go ahead. Just so I know 17 what's going on.

18 MR. GORDON: Sure. You do have the earlier 19 stipulation --

20 THE COURT: Yes.

21 MR. GORDON: -- of facts and exhibits.

22 THE COURT: That was from February 6?

23 MR. GORDON: I believe that's the one.

24 So I'll just read it verbatim.

25 Joint stipulation regarding trial proceedings.

1 Plaintiffs Jake Maggard and Greg Lombardi, parentheses,
2 quote, Plaintiffs, unquote, unparentheses, Defendants
3 State of Missouri and Denny Hoskins in his official 4 capacity as Missouri Secretary of State, parentheses, 5 quote, Defendants, unquote, unparentheses, and 6 Intervenor put Missouri First, parentheses, quote, 7 Intervenor, unquote, and collectively with Plaintiffs 8 and Defendants the, quote, parties, unquote, jointly 9 submit the following stipulations regarding trial
10 proceedings.
11       Number 1, Defendants and Intervenor will 12 not seek any continuance of the trial scheduled for 13 February 10th, 2026 or otherwise delay such trial
14 through other procedural mechanisms.
15       Number 2, the parties have not identified and do 16 not intend to call trial witnesses or reserve the right 17 to call rebuttal witnesses as appropriate.
18       Number 3, the parties waive objections, other 19 than for relevance to the admission of the deposition 20 transcripts of Jake Maggard, Greg Lombardi, 21 Richard Von Glahn and Charles Hatfield and exhibits
22 thereto.
23       Number 4, subject to any relevance objections, 24 the parties waive any requirement that referenced 25 excerpts of the deposition transcripts be read into the 1 record.

2 Number 5, Defendants and Intervenor waive any 3 objections other than for relevance to the admission of 4 the exhibits attached to Plaintiffs' motion for 5 preliminary injunction. See Plaintiffs' motion for 6 preliminary injunction and consolidation of hearing on 7 merits, Exhibit 1 through 15.

8 THE COURT: All right.

9 MS. CAPOZZI: Your Honor, in addition to the 10 Plaintiffs' trial, the State also has a few pending 11 motions to compel with respect to evident. And so I'm 12 not sure, you know, what order it makes sense to go in 13 here. I think we had thought that it would make sense 14 to cover the motion to compel first, before getting 15 started with trial. But we can proceed however is 16 convenient to the Court.

17 THE COURT: That's the motions filed
18 February 4th and 5th?

19 MR. CAPOZZI: Yes, I believe that's right. I 20 believe there are three.

21 THE COURT: The one on the third as well. With 22 the February 3rd motion to compel, it's got some 23 exhibits. Were those exhibits taken care of in the 24 stipulation et al or are you still going to use all of 25 those exhibits?

1 MR. CAPOZZI: So we are still seeking all of the 2 information that we asked for in the motions to compel.
3 We do have one clarification that we wish to make 4 regarding the motion to compel against third-party 5 People Not Politicians.

6 In that motion, we suggested that we are seeking 7 to compel an answer from Mr. Von Glahn, who is funding
8 the Maggard Plaintiff's lawsuit. We are withdrawing 9 that particular request from that motion, but everything 10 else is still pending. And, chiefly, what the State is 11 trying to get is, who's funding the Maggard lawsuit, 12 who's funding People Not Politicians litigation efforts?

13 And also, People Not Politicians admitted that they 14 created strategy documents related to this lawsuit 15 before it was filed. We're seeking to compel those 16 documents.

17 THE COURT: Regarding motion to compel on 2/3?

18 MR. CAPOZZI: So I believe we have -- is it two 19 or three separate motions to compel?

20 THE COURT: Right. One on the 3rd, one on the 21 4th, one on the 6th.

22 MR. CAPOZZI: Yes, Your Honor.

23 THE COURT: Do you want to do them one at a time, 24 back to back to back?

25 Do you want to do them all at one time?

1 MR. CAPOZZI: I think my colleague, Mr. Patton,
2 is prepared to speak to all three at once.

3 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Go ahead.

5 MR. GORDON: Your Honor, we will address the 6 motions to compel that are directed at our Plaintiffs, I
7 believe counsel for PNP to address.

8 MR. BARRETT: That is correct. Alex Barrett and 9 Alix Cossette on behalf of non-parties, People Not 10 Politicians and Richard Von Glahn. We're here to 11 respond to that motion directed towards our clients. I 12 think, as a matter of just logistics, it makes sense to 13 deal with the Plaintiffs here first. It's their show.
14 They can argue that and then we can deal with what we 15 need to take up on the third-party subpoenas.

16 THE COURT: All right.

17 MR. PATTON: I'm happy to proceed in whatever 18 order Your Honor prefers. Do you prefer just focusing 19 on the Plaintiffs first and then dealing separately with 20 the third parties? Or I can address it all at once.

21 THE COURT: I think it's easier doing one, then 22 two, then three. You can do them all together but, if 23 you do part of Motion 1 and part of Motion 3 and then 24 part of Motion 2, it's going to be somewhat rather 25 confusing. So start with issues with Motion 1 from 1 February 2nd, then the February 3rd, and then the 2 February 6th.

3 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Are you okay to reply to all of them
5 at one time, if he goes through them?

6 MR. GORDON: So we're just going to reply to one 7 and two, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: Okay.

9 MR. GORDON: Because those are the ones directed 10 at our clients. And I will say, and Counsel can correct 11 me if I'm wrong, but my understanding is that one and 12 two are basically seeking the same exact information.

13 It's just one is directed at Mr. Lombardi and one is 14 directed against Mr. Maggard. So unless you have 15 different arguments with respect to those, I think we 16 could at least handle those. And I -- my response to 17 them would be the same with respect to both of them.

18 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor. And to clarify, 19 the February 3rd motion to compel is regarding 20 Mr. Lombardi. February 5 is regarding Mr. Maggard.
21 Both were filed following their depositions.

22 May it please the Court, I represent the State 23 and the Secretary of State. There are two motions to 24 compel at issue that I'll address here. Both of these 25 seek evidence that go to the heart of the State's

1 judicial estoppel defense. As the State has argued 2 throughout this case, courts judicially estop proxy
3 plaintiffs when an estop third party seeks to use --

4 THE COURT REPORTER: Slow down.

5 MR. PATTON: -- that proxy plaintiffs to argue a 6 position that the third party cannot argue itself.

7 Here's what we know about the potential coordination 8 based on the discovery collected so far.

9 First, we know that PNP's executive director and 10 PNP's attorney publicly promised that a lawsuit would be 11 brought arguing that HB 1 was frozen by the mere 12 submission of an unverified referendum petition.

13 Second, PNP's executive director admitted that he 14 knew that the ACLU was preparing this lawsuit five days 15 before it was filed.

16 Third, the Missouri ACLU proactively recruited
17 Plaintiffs Maggard and Lombardi to file this lawsuit.

18 Fourth, PNP's executive director admitted that 19 PNP has not currently sued in its own name because the 20 Plaintiffs here sued instead.

21 And further, PNP created strategy documents about 22 this lawsuit before it was filed.

23 Finally, we know that an anonymous third party is 24 funding Plaintiffs' lawsuit here and Plaintiffs could 25 not remember during their depositions who this anonymous

1 third party is, nor could they identify the anonymous
2 third party.
3 The State filed motions to compel because it's 4 entitled to this information about the anonymous
5 third-party funder, at least as to Plaintiffs Lombardi
6 and Maggard. The State has repeatedly asked Plaintiffs 7 to identify the anonymous third-party funder but,
8 essentially, Plaintiffs have refused to turn over this 9 evidence on the basis that they think that the State's 10 judicial estoppel defense is wrong on the law. But 11 whether a party thinks that their opponent's merits 12 theory is correct is not a basis to refuse discovery.

13 I turn the Court's attention to Fergin versus 14 Westrock Company. There the Court said, quote, a party 15 cannot refuse to produce a requested document or 16 information simply because it is relevant to a claim or 17 defense on which the producing party believes that it 18 would prevail.

19 Indeed, a producing party will always take the 20 position that their opponent is wrong on the merits, and 21 especially in an accelerated case like this. We think 22 what should have happened is the Plaintiffs should have 23 provided the State a straight answer on the third party 24 funding this litigation and then allow the Court to make 25 a determination about whether that evidence was

1 relevant. But now the State has been deprived of being 2 able to access this information altogether, and so it's 3 important.

4 Now, in light of my point earlier about the 5 merits and the State's ultimate success on them not 6 being relevant to discovery, I won't get into a lot of 7 the merits arguments that Plaintiffs made regarding the 8 judicial estoppel defense. Mr. Capozzi will address 9 that in a moment. But there is one matter that I would 10 like to clean up: Plaintiffs' claim that judicial 11 estoppel does not apply to legal arguments.

12 I would direct the Court's attention to 13 Footnote 7 of the Boca opinion. There, the Missouri
14 Supreme Court said that judicial estoppel, quote, 15 precludes a party from asserting facts that are 16 inconsistent with a factual position taken by the party 17 in prior proceedings or from a legal position from which 18 the party benefited. So judicial estoppel applies both 19 to inconsistent factual representations and inconsistent 20 legal positions.

21 Finally, I'd like to address Plaintiffs'
22 assertions of privilege over this information. They 23 first invoke attorney-client privilege. That invocation 24 flies in the face of controlling precedent from the 25 Western District. This is State ex rel Koster v. Cain.

1 from the Missouri Supreme Court.

2 THE COURT: Okay.

3 MR. GORDON: Good morning, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Good morning.

5 MR. GORDON: This case poses a legal question.

6 Is HB 1 suspended? Was it suspended when more than 7 300,000 signatures were submitted to the Secretary of 8 State on December 9th? Or rather than focus on that

9 question, Defendants have attempted over and over to 10 divert the Court's attention with a conspiracy theory

11 that has never had any factual or legal basis. And 12 despite getting expedited discovery that resolved the 13 question, Defendants now bring various motions to compel

14 as a continued distraction to divert the Court's

15 attention from the fact that the State has no good legal

16 answer for the decades of the Missouri precedent that 17 undermined their argument that HB 1 has not been 18 suspended.

19 Defendant's theory, you may recall at our first

20 hearing, they said because somebody at PNP said

21 something about bringing a lawsuit like this, but then

22 didn't, this lawsuit Defendants suspect must have been

23 coordinated with PNP and these Plaintiffs are serving as 24 parties. They've never had any evidence to support

25 that. That was just supposition on their part. Just

1 supposition and hopes that, by diverting the Court's 2 attention with that, they could somehow avoid addressing 3 the merits of this case. But because there was and is 4 no ** there and to expedite trial to try to resolve this 5 case so that Missouri voters can have certainty about 6 which congressional map controls or which one is in 7 effect, Plaintiffs and third parties have accommodated 8 disc-- Defendants' discovery request on the very 9 accelerated timetable, even though they've always been 10 seeking information that is entirely irrelevant to this 11 case.

12 Both Plaintiffs and Defendants -- excuse me.

13 Both Plaintiffs and third parties provided responses to 14 interrogatories and RFPs long before they were due.
15 Both Plaintiffs and third parties agreed to sit for 16 depositions on just a couple of days' notice. The 17 discovery responses and the deposition te-- testimony
18 confirmed what we told you -- what I told you the first 19 day in court. We are not coordinating with PNP or 20 Richard Von Glahn or others on this case.

21 But that's not enough for Defendants. In their 22 continuing desperation to distract from the merits -- 23 distract from the merits, they've seized on a couple of 24 isolated pieces of information. With respect to my 25 clients, they've seized on the identity of the party

1 that is funding the li-- litigation, even though we told 2 them it's not PNP, it's not Richard Von Glahn, it's not 3 anybody associated with any of those entities.
4 Nevertheless, that wasn't enough for them. The motions
5 to compel, and these are Motions 1 and 2, fail at every 6 level because the information sought is entirely 7 irrelevant and unlikely to lead to admissible 8 information.

9 Now, the State tells you this information is at 10 the heart of their estoppel case. That may come as a 11 surprise to you, because you heard at the beginning that 12 they had this notion that there was this close 13 coordination and that Plaintiffs were serving as 14 proxies. The doors have been shut on that theory.

15 And now, their new theory that supposedly is at 16 the heart of their estoppel case is that there's a 17 common funder out there who may be funding both PNP or 18 contributing to PNP and funding this litigation. So the 19 heart -- their estoppel theory has more over time, the 20 doors have been closed over this time. It's never had 21 any factual or legal basis.

22 And even if there was something to it, even if 23 there was a common funder, it wouldn't matter because 24 there are no grounds to apply estoppel here, for three 25 reasons. First, there was no inconsistent position

1 taken by PNP in the federal case.

2 Second, Missouri law holds that estoppel does not 3 apply to positions regarding legal -- legal positions.
4 It applies to factual positions.

5 And third, the Plaintiffs here are not proxies.
6 There's no coordination, as we've told you and them 7 repeatedly.

8 First, no basis for judicial estoppel here 9 against anyone, because the supposed concessions, the 10 supposed inconsistent positions that they talk about, 11 that you've heard about from Counsel at every hearing 12 over and over, they never happened. Defendants simply 13 misrepresent what happened at the hearing in the federal 14 court. They also re-- represent the federal court's 15 ruling to suggest that federal court has decided the 16 issue before this court. It did not.

17 The supposed concessions by PNP counsel at that 18 hearing, those related to what happens after the 19 Secretary of State makes a determination of 20 unconstitutionality or insufficiency, after he makes 21 that, the issue was, has the case been -- is the map
22 then unsuspended and what has to happen to get the map
23 back into effect, challenging the Secretary's decisions.
24 That's not at issue in this case.

25 This case is about what happens before the

1 Secretary makes any decision about constitutionality, 2 about certification. As to that issue, PNP counsel took 3 the same position that Plaintiffs are taking in this 4 case, that HB 1 is suspended upon submission of 5 signatures. That what we're arguing here.

6 You don't have to believe me. You can go and 7 look at the transcript, pages 45 to 46. Counsel for PNP 8 said, it is turning in the signatures that ensures that 9 the law will not otherwise go into effect on the 90th 10 day. That's a quote. They reiterated on page 47 that 11 the submission of signatures is what stops the law from 12 going into effect. That's the exact same position that 13 Plaintiffs are taking here.

14 Then the Court starts talking about what happens 15 if the Secretary makes a determination that the 16 referendum is unconstitutional or there aren't enough 17 signatures. That starts at the bottom of page 45 of the 18 transcript. And the Counsel's questions to -- excuse 19 me. The Court's questions to Counsel are about 20 challenges to that decision, the Secretary's decision.

21 And they were talking about that, Your Honor, 22 because the Secretary was taking the position in that 23 case that this referendum was unconstitutional. That's 24 why they were talking about what happens if the 25 Secretary makes that determination. And what is the 1 status of the map pending challenges to the Secretary's 2 decision? In other words, what is the status of the map

3 after the Secretary has acted? That's what the Court 4 was asking Counsel about.

5 And then when you hear -- when you see the parts
6 of Counsel responding to that, that's what she's talking 7 about. The transcript is quite clear. PNP counsel
8 never made the concessions that Defendants claim, so 9 there's no inconsistent position. Which, of course, 10 would be the first thing you would need for estoppel to 11 apply.

12 Moreover, and this will be jumping a little bit 13 to the merits, but the Court never made the ruling that 14 the Defendants' claim that the Court made. The Court's 15 ruling was that the case was not ripe because the 16 Secretary has a unique self-help remedy. He can declare 17 the referendum unconstitutional. Footnote 4, which 18 you've heard a lot about from Plaintiffs -- excuse me -- 19 from Defendants here, there the Court is discussing what 20 happens if the Secretary makes a finding of 21 unconstitutionality. He says the new map would go into 22 effect barring a successful challenge to 23 decertification. Again, what happens after the 24 Secretary acts?

25 Footnote 2, actually, I would submit for the

1 Court, is actually the more telling of the footnotes, 2 because there, the Court notes that the Secretary has 3 taken the position that the petition is constitutionally 4 deficient and the Court says, quote, there is no 5 apparent reason why the Secretary would incur the 6 significant cost of signature verification, given that 7 belief, end quote, i.e., that belief that it's 8 unconstitutional.

9 But as we know, the Secretary has not made that 10 determination, at least not officially. The statement 11 that Defendants cite as supposedly the holding of the 12 case relevant to what happens before the Secretary asks, 13 that's simply the Court's discussion in the background.
14 That is not the holding of the case. Indeed, Your 15 Honor, if there's any issue of inconsistent positions
16 from that holding -- excuse me -- from that hearing, it 17 is actually the State's representations to the Court, 18 which are inconsistent with what they're going to tell 19 you today.

20 Mr. Capozzi said in that courtroom, and I quote, 21 "there's some uncertainty as whether mere submission of 22 the signatures freezes the map or whether it was post 23 certification." This is at page 36, line 6 to 8 of the 24 transcript. So there, before that Court, Mr. Capozzi 25 said there's some uncertainty. It's unclear what

1 happens. Here, in contrast, they're telling you and 2 they say this in the first paragraph of the trial brief.
3 They say this case will decide whether the referendum
4 campaign can freeze a duly enacted State law before 5 certification.

6 The straightforward answer is no, and the Court
7 should reject Plaintiffs' implausible contrary claim.
8 So here they're saying it's straightforward and anybody
9 who argues to the contrary, that's an implausible
10 argument. In federal court, they told the Court there 11 it's uncertain. So again, the only inconsistent
12 positions are ones taken by the State. There is none 13 taken by PNP counsel. And so the whole estoppel theory, 14 the whole basis of it falls apart at the very beginning.

15 Second, even if --

16 THE COURT: Well, he said one thing, what you 17 said here in the federal court and different here. Is 18 it possible his ideas developed --

19 MR. GORDON: It is.

20 THE COURT: -- from Point A to Point B? And if 21 so, how does that deal with the estoppel issue?

22 MR. GORDON: Good question, Your Honor. It is 23 possible that his theory has developed. It's possible
24 that his position has changed. It's possible that it 25 hasn't and he made one representation to the court there

1 to try and get a particular result from that court, and 2 is making a different representation to this Court.

3 THE COURT: So do you know the answer?

4 MR. GORDON: I'm sorry?

5 THE COURT: Do you know the answer to the 6 question?

7 MR. GORDON: No. That's why I'm saying it's 8 certainly possible. And, Your Honor, I'm not -- we're 9 not making an estoppel argument here. I'm just pointing 10 this out as an illustrative point to say, they have made 11 all sorts of comments about a supposed inconsistent 12 position taken by PNP counsel, when, in fact, the 13 inconsistent position was taken by them. And I think 14 it's another diversionary tactic.

15 MR. CAPOZZI: Your Honor, I'm sorry to interrupt.
16 Counsel is taking the case badly out of context.

17 THE COURT: You're not the one that's -- he's 18 arguing the motion here, so he gets to talk. Not to be 19 rude, but it's John's (sic) side right now, so...

20 MR. GORDON: The second point, Your Honor, even 21 if there had been an inconsistent position, even if PNP
22 counsel had made the concession that they did not, there 23 would be no basis for estoppel because, under Missouri 24 law, judicial estoppel applies to factual, not legal 25 representations. This -- you see this in the Steven W.

1 Holiday case and the Kansas City v. Martin case cited in 2 our briefing. Both of those courts say the change of 3 position regarding a legal issue does not work in 4 estoppel. That makes sense, Your Honor.

5 The law is the law, regardless of what position a 6 party takes on it. A party's position about the law 7 cannot control what the Court decides the law to be.

8 And this is especially true when it comes to issues of 9 public law like co-- the constitutional rights that are 10 at issue here. Even if a party in a different case had 11 taken a different legal position, it would not make 12 sense to apply estoppel because the law is the law and 13 that's for this Court to decide.

14 Third, even if PNP counsel had made that 15 representation, they did not, and judicial estoppel
16 would apply to PNP under those circumstances, and it 17 does not, there's still no basis to apply to these 18 Plaintiffs. Discovery has conclusively established what 19 we've said all along. There's no coordination between 20 Plaintiffs and PNP in bringing this lawsuit for -- and 21 proceeding with this lawsuit. We made that

22 representation in court, repeatedly. Plaintiffs said
23 that in their discovery responses and in depositions.
24 So did the third parties.

25 They asked them -- both of the third parties have

1 you had any input? Have you had to -- have you reviewed
2 the briefing? Have you coordinated with them? They all
3 said no. At most, all they're left with is this wild 4 theory that maybe, just maybe, there's some funder in 5 common between two different organizations. Even if 6 that were true -- and it's not, but even if it were, 7 that would not provide a basis for judicial estoppel.

8 The authority cited by Defendants that they hang 9 their hat on deals with very, very different situations 10 that are miles apart factually. And I think you just 11 need to look at the first paragraph of the case that 12 they have most heavily relied on here, Grochocinski, 13 with apologies.

14 THE COURT: How do you spell that? Seriously, 15 for Jenny.

16 MR. GORDON: Yes, thank you. And I wrote it down 17 here, G-r-o-c-h-o-c-i-n-s-k-i. And my apologies for the 18 Plaintiff in that case for butchering the name.

19 THE COURT: Common spelling.

20 MR. GORDON: I should have said that.

21 The Court lays out, and we've put this in our 22 briefing, that case involved a scheme to defraud the 23 Court that was so egregious that the Court begins a 24 decision by talking about Rumpelstiltskin and spinning
25 straw into gold. And it goes through the various parts

1 of the scheme that the parties concocted to end up with 2 a party that otherwise would not have gotten any 3 recovery in getting recovery. That's the type of 4 situation where judicial estoppel has been applied. And 5 again, those are all positions related to facts but 6 those are the type of situations where judicial estoppel
7 applies to prevent a fraud on the Court, to prevent -- 8 to prevent reversion of the justice system. Those cases 9 are miles apart. And they do not even begin to suggest 10 that estoppel should apply to a situation involving 11 common funder.

12 Finally, Your Honor, even if the information they 13 sought here -- well, let me say, for all those reasons, 14 the information that they seek is and always has been 15 completely irrelevant and unlikely to lead to any 16 invisible information. But even if it had a whiff of 17 relevance, the identify of the party funding the 18 litigation on behalf of Plaintiffs is protected by the 19 First Amendment privilege.

20 The cases are cited in the briefing. NAACP
21 versus Alabama, Matthews case out of Florida, IN RE Bay 22 Area Citizens against Lawsuit Abuse decided by the 23 Supreme Court of Texas. What these courts all recognize 24 is that requiring the disclosure of such information 25 would have a chilling effect on the rights of the 1 organization and of association.

2 Now, Defendants argue that this case is nothing 3 like NAACP. And there are different facts as there are 4 in every case but, although the facts are different, the 5 principles, the concern about the chilling effect on the 6 First Amendment rights is the same. And the requiring 7 disclosure here to the State of Missouri would have that 8 same issues with the chilling effect.

9 And as we stated in the briefing, Your Honor, 10 when a litigant seeks information protected by the First 11 Amendment, the litigant must make a showing of need 12 beyond its mere relevance. They haven't even come close 13 to showing any relevance, let alone a need beyond that.

14 For all these, Your Honor, the motion to compel 15 should be -- the motions to compel should be denied.
16 This fishing expedition should end and we should proceed 17 to trial on the stipulated facts and exhibits.

18 I'm happy to answer any other questions the Court 19 has.

20 THE COURT: No questions. Mr. Ellinger?

21 MR. CAPOZZI: Your Honor, briefly if I may. Just 22 a question of procedure.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. CAPOZZI: So I had thought this was going to 25 be a brief argument on the discovery.

1 My colleague just made a lot of merits arguments.
2 He argued why our estoppel defense lacks merit. My plan 3 was to address the merits arguments after we dealt with 4 admissible. This is just a fight over whether evidence
5 is discoverable. I mean normally you don't have a full 6 merits arguments on whether the underlining defense is 7 meritorious merely to decide whether discovery is 8 available.

9 So if the Court wants to hear full merits
10 argument on this issue now, I'd like to make my argument
11 and I'd like to address, you know, including among other 12 things, why counsel took my comments in the federal case 13 very much out of context. If the court just wants this 14 to be a simple discovery argument, you know, we can just 15 stick to that.

16 THE COURT: Yeah, I don't care to have a merits 17 argument right now.

18 MR. CAPOZZI: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Mr. Ellinger, anything?

20 MR. ELLINGER: Nothing on this issue, Judge.

21 Mr. Patton?

22 MR. PATTON: Your Honor, with that I don't think 23 there's much else to say. I heard a lot about the 24 merits there. There was never any addressing by 25 Plaintiffs' counsel regarding the case law that I cited

1 as to an ultimate success on a merits theory somehow
2 undermining the ability to collect discovery. You know,
3 I don't -- I -- again, I can address the merits. I
4 think that the Court's opinion is quite clear in Von 5 Glahn case. I think that Mr. Capozzi's comments there
6 was very clear as well. I would urge the Court go read 7 what Mr. Capozzi actually said on page 36. He went on 8 to say the State's position is that the freezing will 9 occur after certification even though there was some 10 unclarity about that at that point in time before the 11 Von Glahn decision. But we now believe that this issue 12 is very clear.

13 Thank you, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Any reply.

15 MR. GORDON: Your Honor, I have nothing further.

16 I -- I would encourage the Court to read that, the 17 transcript of the hearing and -- which I think is very 18 clear and also at the decision there, which I think is 19 clear as well.

20 So unless the Court has questions for me, I have 21 nothing further.

22 THE COURT: Okay. In all the suggestions and the 23 motions, is the transcript attached anywhere?

24 MR. GORDON: The transcript of the hearing?

25 THE COURT: Yes.

1 MR. GORDON: Yes, it is. I believe it's 2 Exhibit 6 to your motion; is that correct.

3 MR. PATTON: Your Honor, the transcript of the 4 Von Glahn hearing?

5 THE COURT: The one you're telling me to read. I
6 think Mr. Capozzi said on page 36.

7 MR. GORDON: 36, yes. And where PNP counsel
8 talked about this on pages 45 and 46.

9 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor. And I would also 10 turn the Court's attention to the transcript which is 11 attached to our trial exhibit index. If Your Honor were 12 to look the index I believe the transcript is exhibit -- 13 close to Exhibit 118 --

14 MR. GORDON: 119.

15 MR. PATTON: 119, Yes, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Thank you.

17 MR. GORDON: Just for the record, Your Honor, I 18 think that the -- that exhibit, that transcript has been 19 submitted to the Court in connection with the motions to 20 compel. It's also been identified on the exhibit list.
21 And this is something I should have mentioned before.

22 The Defendants' exhibit list here includes a number of 23 exhibits that were not part of the stipulation. We can 24 turn to those when we get to the trial piece of this.
25 But wanted to flag that for the Court.

1 THE COURT: Okay: Is that the 126 exhibits
2 something like.

3 GORDON: I think they start at 98. So there's 4 fewer than 126.

5 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor. I believe we 6 128 -- not 28 exhibits, Your Honor.

7 THE COURT: The final motion to compel?

8 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor.

9 So now, turning to People Not Politicians and 10 Richard Von Glahn's opposition to the State's motion to 11 compel, the State is seeking two categories of 12 information. First, it's seeking strategy documents 13 that People Not Politicians and Richard Von Glahn -- or 14 rather, Richard Von Glahn admitted, during his 15 deposition, exist. These are prefiling strategy
16 documents that go to the fact that People Not 17 Politicians knew about the Maggard, this lawsuit before 18 it was filed.

19 The PNP and Von Glahn central response is to 20 argue that these strategy documents are irrelevant.

21 This -- my response to this is the same as the response 22 to the Plaintiffs. Ultimate -- the -- their argument is 23 it's irrelevant because the State want be able to 24 succeed on the merits of its estoppel defense. But 25 that's a completely separate question that the Court

1 should ultimately be tasked with resolving itself, if it
2 believes that these documents are irrelevant. We don't 3 believe that these documents should have been withheld.

4 Second, the State is seeking information about 5 the identity of the third parties providing donations
6 supporting the litigation funding of People Not 7 Politicians. As Mr. Capozzi clarified earlier, this is 8 abso-- absolutely relevant as a common funding source 9 for Plaintiffs' lawsuit here. And PNP's litigation 10 expenses would be extremely strong evidence suggesting 11 coordination and requiring application of judicial 12 estoppel.

13 Mr. Von Glahn and PNP claim in response to this 14 information should not be turned over under a statute, 15 Section 130.185. They say that bars the Attorney 16 General from asking for information about the identity 17 of PNP's donors supporting its litigation funding. But 18 this statute has no applicability here. Chapter 130 19 deals with campaign finance disclosure laws of the 20 Missouri Revised Statute. Section 130.185 discusses 21 investigations into alleged violations of campaign
22 finance disclosure laws.

23 We don't believe that this statute limits the 24 discovery right of Defendants when the Attorney General 25 is acting as their legal representation. Here, the

1 Defendants are the State of Missouri and the Missouri
2 Secretary of State and they have discovery rights just 3 like anyone else. Section 130.185 does not aggregate 4 that.

5 Thank you.

6 THE COURT REPORTER: I'm sorry. I forgot your 7 name.

8 THE COURT: That's Mr. Barrett.

9 Before you start, I've got a question for you, 10 Mr. Patton. So 130.185 bars attack on its right of 11 privacy regarding their donations restricting the AG 12 from disclosing donor identities, unless they are 13 involved in prohibited conduct under 130.170. So are 14 you saying that it does not apply, because there's 15 conduct under 130.170?

16 MR. PATTON: No, Your Honor. Our argument is, 17 rather, that this statute is about a statutory scheme of 18 campaign finance disclosure law. And the statute deals 19 with circumstances where documents can be requested as a 20 part of investigations and it -- and it enumerates a 21 particular section related to campaign finance 22 disclosure investigations.

23 But that's not dealing with what were -- that's 24 not related to what we're dealing with here, which is 25 two defendants who are not the Attorney General's Office

1 themselves. The State of Missouri and the Secretary of 2 State who have the Attorney General as their legal 3 counsel and have discovery rights, just like any other 4 litigant, and we don't believe that the statute operates 5 those discovery rights.

6 THE COURT: Not done with you yet.

7 MR. PATTON: Yes, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: But doesn't it say that the 9 disclosure of any identity of a donor cannot be 10 discovered unless it's a violation of under 170 to 11 130.188? So are you alleging that it's a violation of 12 Sections 170 through 188?

13 MR. PATTON: No, Your Honor. We're not. Rather, 14 as our -- as I mentioned our position is that simply 15 this statute is related to a category of laws about 16 campaign finance disclosure, investigations. This is 17 not what is at issue here, rather the Attorney General
18 is simple legal representation for the State of Missouri
19 and the Missouri Secretary of State who are Defendants 20 in this case and have discovery rights. And we don't 21 believe that the statute aggregate those discovery 22 rights.

23 THE COURT: Okay.

24 MR. PATTON: Thank you, Your Honor.

25 MR. BARRETT: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 It seems -- I'll have to be confused. I'm a bit 2 lost. It seems we need to have a review on how motion
3 practice works. So we got a motion to compel last week.
4 They asked for two things in that motion. Neither of 5 which were the thing that you were just talking about 6 with Mr. Patton. So we got a motion that said that we'd 7 like to compel some documents, which he talked about.
8 I'm here to address that. The other thing that they 9 asked in that motion to compel was that Richard Von 10 Glahn answered the question of who is funding this 11 lawsuit, the Maggard lawsuit. And as we pointed out in 12 our opposition that was an interesting request because 13 that question was never asked at his deposition. They 14 did ask, who is paying Perkins Coie and Mr. Von Glahn 15 said I don't know. We've submitted an affidavit with 16 our opposition to the motion to compel they filed that 17 said, we weren't asked the question of who is funding 18 this lawsuit. But if they had ask that question, the 19 answer would be we don't know. Mr. Von Glahn does not 20 know who is funding this lawsuit.

21 Now, what I'm hearing being argued is that they 22 want you to, I guess, compel us to disclose who all of 23 the donors to PNP generally are. That's not what they 24 asked for in the motion to compel. So I -- I don't 25 think there's any basis to grant it for that reason

1 alone. But, yes, those questions were asked at 2 Mr. Von Glahn's deposition. They kept asking him, who 3 are PNP donors that have earmarked funds to be used in 4 PNP's litigation efforts? The specific question was, 5 basically, who's giving you money to pay for the federal 6 lawsuit that you are involved in with the Secretary of 7 State?

8 And Mr. Chris Grant, who was representing PNP at 9 that deposition, appropriately objected under 10 Section 130.185, the Attorney General shall not collect 11 or require the submission of information on the identity 12 of any donor to a tax-exempt organization, other than 13 those directly related to an alleged violation of the 14 campaign finance laws. That's not what they're 15 claiming.

16 And, in fact, the next sentence, any collection
17 or required submission of information by the Attorney 18 General regarding the identity of any donor to a 19 tax-exempt organization beyond that permitted by 20 Sections 130.170 to 130.188 shall be deemed a violation 21 of Section 105.1500. They're asking you to enter an 22 order compelling us to disclose our donor list.

23 And by the way, if that is the request that they 24 had made in their motion, we would have had some 25 additional objections under First Amendment grounds

1 similar to what the Plaintiffs have asserted. You can't 2 require us to turn over our donor list as a matter of 3 the federal Constitution or as a matter of this Missouri
4 statute and that's not what their motion says.

5 And how is any of this relevant? To go back to 6 where I was going to start, you know, we agree with the 7 Plaintiffs that it is time for this sideshow to come to 8 an end. Everybody has bent over backwards to answer
9 discovery to tell the Secretary of State that PNP is not 10 behind this lawsuit. We're not funding it. We don't 11 know who's funding it. We haven't provided any drafting 12 support. We haven't provided any litigation support.

13 And, frankly, I find these arguments to be pretty 14 offensive.

15 You've got good attorneys here who are ready to 16 argue this case. They haven't asked for my office's 17 help and they don't need my office's help. Like, we're 18 not involved in this in any way. And the Secretary and 19 the Defendants have convinced themselves that we're 20 lying, and that's certainly their prerogative. But 21 there is no evidence whatsoever to suggest any 22 coordination.

23 And what's interesting when you heard counsel for 24 the Plaintiffs speaking earlier is he mentioned that 25 their -- the Defendants' theory of estoppel has now

1 morphed. And that's certainly true with respect to the 2 motion that they filed against the Plaintiffs. They 3 seem to have this common funder theory. But the theory
4 that they have articulated in the motion they filed
5 concerning my clients is still on this coordination 6 theory. And I don't know how many times we can make 7 clear that we have nothing to do with this lawsuit.
8 At the end of the day, the only fact that they 9 have managed to come up with is that Mr. Von Glahn, the 10 executive director of PNP, was made aware of this 11 lawsuit on December 18th, five days before it was filed.
12 He testified to that in his deposition. There was not a 13 single follow-up question. Not one about the 14 circumstances by which he learned about this lawsuit.
15 They don't care. They would rather come in here and 16 speculate to you about this nefarious plot that we have 17 to jiu jitsu the Court into relieving my client of a 18 judicial admission that they never made.
19 And I'm not going to spend time on the merits, 20 because I think that was pretty well covered by 21 Plaintiffs' counsel. The transcript is in the record.
22 It does not say what they claim it says. And I find it
23 a little ironic for Mr. Capozzi to get up and express 24 frustration with being misquoted. It -- it's not fun, 25 and that's been happening on to us for months now. And

1 I think the Court should read the transcript and you can 2 see.

3 It's interestingly enough lawyers from both 4 parties make comments somewhere in that transcript or 5 throughout that transcript saying, you know, Missouri
6 law is a bit unclear. I don't know how you can have a 7 clear judicial admission when everyone is telling the 8 Court, you know, we're in uncharted territory here. The 9 documents, they have been misleadingly described to you 10 as strategy documents. I want to be clear, I -- Judge, 11 if you want to order us to turn those over, I've got a 12 copy for all counsel. I brought a copy for you, if I 13 may, for in-camera review.

14 THE COURT: Any objection if I review this in 15 camera?

16 MR. PATTON: No, Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Mr. Ellinger?

18 MR. ELLINGER: No objection.

19 MR. BARRETT: They continue to describe these as 20 strategy documents. I think the way we talked about 21 them was media strategy. What they are, Judge, is 22 there's some e-mails talking about a draft press release 23 that PNP would issue to reporters should they ask about 24 this lawsuit once it was filed. And if you look in 25 that, I've tabbed it for you, but there's basically

1 three sets of documents.
2 The first tab is, essentially, just an e-mail 3 exchange between PNP's director of communications on the 4 23rd of December, the day this case was filed, with a
5 reporter from the Jefferson City News Tribune who asked 6 if they had a statement. She said, we do. Here it is.
7 And then there was a question that was asked by the 8 reporter about the Attorney General demanding that we, 9 my client withdraw statements that had been made to the 10 news media on threat of them seeking sanctions in 11 federal court.

12 Which they did, by the way. That sanctions 13 motion has been sitting in front of Judge Bluestone for 14 a couple of months, as has a motion to reopen the case 15 making accusations -- the same accusations they're 16 making to you that we misled the Court and bamboozled 17 it. And Judge Bluestone has not reopened the case and 18 he has not sanctioned us. Which I think tells you all 19 you need to know about his view on whether he was misled 20 or not.

21 The second category of the documents and, in 22 fact, almost all of them what you see is their various 23 visions of an e-mail that was exchanged on December 22, 24 the day before the lawsuit was filed in which 25 Mr. Von Glahn and his press person are just sending back

1 and forth a draft press release language -- this -- the 2 same language that got sent to the News Tribune the 3 following day.

4 And then third document is simply a copy of an 5 e-mail in which the ACLU communication director, after 6 the lawsuit was filed, sent a copy of a public press
7 release to PNP and they said thanks.

8 I -- I don't know how any of that advances the 9 ball on this j-- judicial estoppel argument. I'm not -- 10 I just described them in court. I'm not that concerned 11 if you want to order us to turn them over, but I also 12 don't want to encourage rewarding bad behavior here. We 13 have done our best to answer all the questions that have 14 been asked. There is no collusion or coordination or 15 whatever else you want to call it here, and they should 16 not be allowed to use the Court's subpoena power to 17 obtain internal media strategy documents from somebody 18 they have a political disagreement with.

19 That's my view, Your Honor.

20 THE COURT: All right.

21 MR. PATTON: Your Honor, there's not much further 22 to say about other than a couple of things. First, you 23 know, I find it interesting that there's been a lot of 24 discussion about what these strategy documents say here
25 and in the motion or opposition to our motion to compel

1 filed yesterday. That's exactly the kind of information
2 that we wanted to collect in discovery, but were denied 3 the opportunity to be able to do because People Not 4 Politicians and Von Glahn have been withholding this 5 information. You know, if the Court wants to engage an 6 in camera review we're happy for that. Frankly,
7 however, if Mr. Barrett is not concerned about the Court
8 turning over the documents, I'm not sure why we're 9 engaging in camera review currently.

10 Furthermore, I'd like to say regarding the 11 pending sanctions motion that still in front of 12 Judge Bluestone, if the motion had as little merit as 13 Mr. Barrett just claimed, the motion could have been 14 denied easily within a couple of days. Instead it's 15 been pending for a couple of month at this point, 16 showing that Judge Bluestone is looking at this question 17 very closely.

18 Thank you, Your Honor.

19 THE COURT: Any replied.

20 MR. BARRETT: Nope.

21 THE COURT: Mr. Ellinger?

22 MR. ELLIGNER: Nope. Document Not an Official Court Docu

23 THE COURT: All right. The Court is going to 24 recess for about 15 minutes.

25 (A RECESS WAS TAKEN.)

1 THE COURT: Back on the record in 25AC-CC09120,
2 Jake Maggard et al v. State of Missouri. The same
3 parties are present as before. We just heard arguments
4 on the motions to compel, three total, which the Court
5 denies motion to compel at this time.

6 Are we ready for the trial?

7 MR. CAPOZZI: Yes, Your Honor.

8 MR. GORDON: We are ready, Your Honor. And we 9 spoke with counsel about how we envision this going.
10 And if you'd like to, we're prepared to discuss kind of 11 what the order of operation -- we suggested order of 12 operation if you will.

13 THE COURT: Yeah, that's fine.

14 MR. GORDON: So I think, initially, there were 15 some evidentiary issues. As I mentioned, we stipulated 16 to many facts and exhibits, but there are a few that are 17 subject to evidentiary issues, and so I think it 18 probably makes sense to start there. And then after 19 that, Your Honor, given that neither party is intending 20 to call witnesses except for potential rebuttal 21 witnesses, we think that we can consolidate things, we 22 condense opening argument and closing statement just 23 into a combined argument by Plaintiffs and then response 24 by Defendant with references to the evidence, if that 25 works for the Court. And I believe that's what we

1 talked about with Mr. Capozzi.

2 THE COURT: And where does the Intervenor come 3 in here?

4 MR. GORDON: That's a good question.

5 My apologies, Ms. Bell.

6 MR. PATTON: We're fine with just taking up these 7 evidentiary issues first and just doing argument.

8 THE COURT: Okay. That will work. Who's going 9 first?

10 MR. PATTON: Perhaps it makes sense for 11 Plaintiffs to go first.

12 MR. GORDON: I believe that there were exhibits 13 that you wanted -- I'm sorry. We do have the ones -- we 14 do have our exhibits and then you have your -- the 15 deposition transcript; is that right?

16 MR. GORDON: Yes, Your Honor. The deposition
17 transcripts and the exhibit attached. So as long as all 18 parties agree that those have been admitted into 19 evidence at this point?

20 MR. PATTON: No, we don't agree. We don't agree 21 on that, yeah. Okay. So I think -- I think the issues 22 here are just for Your Honor's benefit, are there are 23 the parties have reserved relevance objections to two 24 sets of -- general sets of exhibits. One the -- our 25 exhibits that were attached to the motion for PI. And 1 two, the deposition transcripts and associated exhibits.

2 Do I have that right, Counsel?

3 MR. GORDON: Yes, sir.

4 THE COURT: So what are your exhibit numbers that 5 are in question?

6 MR. GORDON: 1 through 15. So we would move to 7 admit those into the record at this time, Your Honor.

8 THE COURT: And what are yours that are 9 contested?

10 MR. PATTON: So, Your Honor, we believe that 11 Exhibits 98 to 117 are the exhibits that are attached to 12 the deposition transcripts and then deposition 13 transcripts themselves, we offer to admit all of those 14 into evidence.

15 THE COURT: Are all of those the ones that are 16 subject to objection?

17 MR. GORDON: They are, Your Honor. And I
18 apologize, I misspoke. There is a third set of exhibits
19 and that is potentially at issue here and those are I 20 believe Exhibits 118 to -- through 126 which are 21 additional exhibits that were not deposition exhibits 22 so. The -- there basically all the exhibits on the 23 Defendants' exhibit list depending on, I don't know if 24 they're intending to move them all into evidence or not 25 but we have potential obje-- objection to all of those

1 but it's the three different buckets of -- 2 THE COURT: So if there's an objection to every 3 single exhibit, what's the point of taking them up right 4 now.

5 MR. GORDON: Well, I think at least with respect
6 to the deposition transcripts I think that there is a 7 blanket objection to those. I don't know -- I don't 8 know counsel's position on our exhibits. So I don't 9 know if we actually have to address that, but we would 10 move to admit Exhibits 1 through 15. With respect to 11 the deposition transcripts and associated exhibits, 12 counsel and I talked about, we think that those 13 potentially can be addressed all at once.

14 MR. CAPOZZI: Your Honor, I -- just to add to 15 that, we have no objection to the admission of 16 Plaintiffs' exhibits. My understanding of Plaintiffs'
17 objections to the deposition transcripts is they have a 18 blanket relevance objection. Their argument is that, so 19 we want to cite the deposition transcripts to support 20 our estoppel defense. I think you've already heard the 21 gist of their objection this morning. They think that 22 evidence is not relevant because they think that the 23 estoppel defense is not valid. The State would suggest 24 that the Court take that relevance objection with the 25 case and it can address those arguments when it

1 addresses the merits of the estoppel defense. But the 2 State has no objection to Plaintiffs, you know, 3 reserving their objection there.

4 THE COURT: So there's no objection to 5 Plaintiffs' 1 thought 15 coming in?

6 MR. CAPOZZI: Correct.

7 THE COURT: And you have a blanket objection of 8 relevance to 98 through 128?

9 MR. GORDON: Through 117. The Defendant exhibit
10 list has the deposition transcripts at the beginning.
11 Those were unnumbered. And then 98 through 117, is my 12 understanding of the deposition exhibits. And so our 13 objection on those points, Your Honor, is that those 14 transcripts and associated exhibits are irrelevant
15 because the State has only indicated -- and Counsel can 16 correct me if I'm wrong, but I -- I think the only 17 purported relevance is to the judicial estoppel defense.

18 And for the reasons stated earlier, we believe 19 and we've laid out why that judicial estoppel is 20 offense -- defense has merits.

21 THE COURT: Okay.

22 MR. CAPOZZI: I -- I agree with that, Your Honor, 23 with just one small addition. We also have a couple of 24 citations to the deposition transcripts in our pretrial 25 brief related to standing. Just a couple of things that

1 Maggard and Lombardi said about their injuries in the 2 deposition. But, yes, otherwise the State citations are 3 related to its estoppel defense.

4 THE COURT: Okay. And any objection to 118 to 5 126?

6 MR. GORDON: Yes, Your Honor. And it depends, I
7 think for those it's not so much a blanket objection.
8 We're not entirely sure what they intend to do with 9 those, so I think for those we would likely reserve 10 until we see if they move to admitted those during their 11 presentation.

12 THE COURT: Okay.

13 MR. PATTON: Your Honor, if I may regarding 14 Exhibit 119 that's the hearing transcript of the 15 preliminary injunction hearing from Missouri General 16 Assembly versus Von Glahn, we would move to offer that 17 into evidence at this point. The parties were citing 18 that transcript earlier. I think both parties want the 19 Court to be able to view that transcript. So I'm 20 interested to hear as to whether Plaintiffs have an 21 objection.

22 MR. GORDON: No, as to 119. No objection as to 23 119, Your Honor. The rest of the documents 118 and then 24 120 through 126 are at minimum would -- are hearsay.
25 And again, whether they're relevant or not I think

1 depends on -- whether we have further objections depends 2 on what they want to admit them for.

3 MR. PATTON: Your honor, at this time we would 4 move to offer Exhibits 120 to 125 into evidence. These 5 are the Secretary of State's cer-- official certificates
6 on the ballot -- on prior ballot petition sufficiency 7 which contains signature verification rates for prior 8 ballot petitions. These are self-authenticating
9 documents under Missouri Revised Statutes
10 Section 490.180, which says, and I quote, "copies of all 11 papers on file in the Office of the Secretary of State, 12 State Treasurer, State Auditor and Register of Lands or 13 any matter recorded and either of said offices certified 14 under this seal of the respective offices shall be 15 evidence in all courts of this state." That precisely 16 describes Exhibits 120 to 125, Your Honor.

17 MR. HAWLEY: And we object to the introduction of 18 these on relevance grounds as well. Whether or not 19 prior initiative and referendum were certified and the 20 nature of those certifications are certainly not at 21 issue here, and so we don't believe they're -- they are 22 relevant. As with the relevance objections to the 23 depositions and the exhibits, we're happy to have this 24 objection on the record and it can be dealt with, you 25 know, in post-trial briefing or wherever most helpful,

1 once we understand better how the State intends to use
2 those exhibits.
3 But we will object to their introduction on 4 relevance grounds because we're here to talk about the 5 referendum on HB 1. And I struggle to see how any other 6 referen-- or initiatives are relevant to that question.

7 THE COURT: What about 126?

8 MR. PATTON: Your Honor, we're not moving to any 9 of that into evidence.

10 THE COURT: I'll take the objections with the 11 case. So 1 to 15 on Plaintiffs is in.

12 (EXHIBIT NOS. 1 THROUGH 15 WERE RECEIVED INTO 13 EVIDENCE.)

14 THE COURT: Mr. Ellinger, anything from you?

15 MR. ELLINGER: No, Judge. I think the -- I think 16 the statutory requirement of Secretary of State records 17 overwhelms any kind of objection.

18 THE COURT: Okay. Thank you.

19 Before we get started, this is a very emotionally
20 charged case. Right. It's a very politically charged 21 case. But we are not a court of politics. We're a 22 court of law. So if we could just stay the legal 23 discussion on things. I don't need the editorialized of 24 political things. You can do it if you want to, but it 25 really doesn't matter. It's not what we're here for

1 today. We're here today, what's the law says and how 2 the facts apply to the law so.

3 Plaintiff your case.

4 MR. HAWLEY: Thank you, Your Honor. I have just 5 a brief demonstrative that I gave to Defendants' 6 counsel. I'll also, if I may, hand to Intervenor as 7 well.

8 Sorry, Marc.

9 May I approach --

10 THE COURT: Yeah.

11 MR. HAWLEY: -- Your Honor? It will look 12 familiar.

13 THE COURT: And you all can approach without 14 asking.

15 MR. HAWLEY: Oh, thank you. So I believe it's 16 still morning. Yes. Good morning, Your Honor.

17 Jonathan Hawley for Plaintiffs.

18 To start Plaintiffs' case, I actually want to 19 second something that the Court just said. This case is 20 not about politics. This case is about the law. And 21 it's about a very straightforward legal question. So 22 once we remove the distractions, once we rid ourselves 23 of the red herrings, this case comes down to a fairly 24 simple legal question: Was HB 1 suspended when 25 50,000 pages of signed referendum petitions were

1 submitted to the Secretary of State's Office on 2 December 9th, 2025?

3 That's the only issue that the Court needs to 4 decide in this case. And that's a straightforward 5 question, but it's also a very important one. For the 6 past 100 years, the referendum power has allowed the 7 people of Missouri to reserve a share of legislative 8 power for themselves. If I can borrow some language
9 from the Missouri Supreme Court, it is participatory 10 democracy in its pure form. It gives the people the 11 chance to say, we have a voice, we have the say in the 12 laws that govern our state.

13 And for the past 100 years, Missouri courts at 14 all levels have safeguarded that right against 15 manipulation, whether that's legislative manipulation or 16 executive manipulation. A critical facet of the 17 referendum power is this: Referred legislation is 18 suspended until the people have their opportunity to 19 vote it up or vote it down.

20 And there's a straightforward reason for that.
21 If legislation could take effect before the people have 22 their say, the referendum power would be meaningless.
23 It would be hollow and a loser. Maybe it wouldn't even 24 matter and it wouldn't be worth protecting.

25 Now, the facts of this case do make this

1 consideration particularly acute, and here's why. The 2 first chance the people of Missouri will have to approve
3 or reject HB 1 is going to be the November 2026 general
4 election. And if things go the way they have gone,
5 HB 1's map will be implemented for that election. So 6 this story could end with the people of Missouri voting
7 down HB 1, while simultaneously electing representatives 8 from its map and having unconstitutional districts for 9 two years afterwards.

10 Now, again, this question exists for any 11 referendum. But the fact that we're dealing with a 12 congressional map here makes the problem all more acute, 13 and it makes it all the more important for clear 14 guidance from this Court that re-- that legislation like 15 HB 1 is suspended when signed petition statements are 16 submitted to the Secretary of State's office.

17 Ultimately, Your Honor, either the people of 18 Missouri have a referendum right or they don't. And if 19 they do, that right cannot be held captive to partisan
20 wins or the Secretary's caprices or the Attorney 21 General's erroneous view of the law or anything else.
22 If they have that right, that right needs to be 23 protected. It cannot be treated as a disposable right 24 that exists solely when it's convenient for one party or 25 another.

1 So that's the framework that I'm approaching
2 this. If we agree that the referendum right is 3 important, then we have to get into what exactly does it 4 mean and how does it function in operation? And that 5 question then asks, basically, how do Plaintiffs know
6 that we're right? Why is our position in this case
7 correct and the State's and Intervenor's is not correct?
8 And there are three reasons why we know this is the 9 case. There's a what, a why and a when. And once we 10 address those three predicates, it compels the 11 conclusion that Plaintiffs are right and HB 1 is 12 suspended.

13 So we'll start with the what here. The what is 14 fairly straightforward, because it comes right from the 15 text of the Missouri Constitution. Article 3, 16 Section 52B says that the legislation, when referred to 17 the people, takes effect, quote, when approved by a 18 majority of the votes cast thereon and not otherwise.
19 It has to follow, therefore, that legislation cannot 20 ever take effect before the people have the opportunity 21 to vote it up or vote it down.

22 That is the requirement. Legislation cannot take 23 effect until it's approved by voters, once the reference 24 process has been initiated. And why is that? Is 25 something that we also --

1 THE COURT: So if initiated and they find there's 2 not significant signatures, is there a requirement to 3 vote?

4 MR. HAWLEY: No. No. And I --

5 THE COURT: So if it's upon initiation, bridge 6 that gap for me, if you would.

7 MR. HAWLEY: Absolutely. Okay. And so very 8 briefly before I get to that question, because that's 9 the when question. Right. I just want to -- if I may 10 briefly emphasize the why question. Why is it that 11 something has to be suspended before the people vote.
12 Because we have to accept that as a critical

13 precondition here. And the Missouri Supreme Court 50 14 plus years, State ex rel Moore v. Toberman, that's 15 250 SW 2d 701.

16 THE COURT: 250 SW 2d 701.

17 MR. HAWLEY: Yes, Your Honor.

18 THE COURT: Thank you.

19 MR. HAWLEY: And there the Missouri Supreme Court
20 said that the purpose of the referendum, the very reason 21 we have a referendum right is to suspend or annul a law
22 which has not gone into effect and provide the people a 23 means of giving expression and require their approval 24 before it becomes operative as a law.

25 In other words, Your Honor, there would be no

1 referendum right if legislation was allowed to take 2 effect, only to then be suspended and then voted on. It
3 would be no different than if the State were to suggest 4 that legislation could take effect before the Governor 5 had the opportunity to exercise his veto. That's just 6 not how the system works. It would be -- it would 7 defeat the whole purpose because, again, the referendum 8 right is a share of the legislative power that the 9 people hold. So legislation can't go into effect if 10 it's subject to the referendum process.

11 And that leads me to your question, Your Honor, 12 is the when. How do we bridge the gap here and how does 13 this process play out in practice. The when is that 14 legislation must be suspended upon submission of 15 petitions by the constitutional deadline. And the 16 reason we know that is because of something that we 17 talked about at the last hearing. These dually 90 day 18 clocks that apply to legislation in Missouri. On one 19 hand we have the effective date of legislation. That's 20 Article 3, Section 29 of the Missouri Constitution. And 21 generally speaking, legislation takes effect 90 days 22 after adjournment of the session where it was enacted.

23 On the other side, we have the referendum 24 deadline to submit petitions. 90 days after the 25 adorning of the section where the referred legislation

1 was enacted. That's Article 3, Section 52-A. So we 2 have these two deadlines. And the only way to make 3 sense of those deadlines and then to make sense of the 4 referendum right, is to conclude that a law takes effect
5 after 90 days unless petitions had been filed to start 6 the referendum process to refer it to the people.
7 Because if legislation were not automatically suspended 8 upon the submission of petitions, those laws would 9 automatically take effect. And we know that can't be 10 because the referendum power addresses legislation that 11 has not go into effect. And we know that again because, 12 the Missouri Supreme Court has said so time and time 13 again.

14 And so that means that the automatic suspension
15 happens as an operation of law. And then the secretary 16 has his statutory obligation to undertake the review
17 process. And once that review process happens, 18 legislation can be unsuspended. Now, it's -- it's -- 19 this kind of gets at the heart of something that the 20 State has said in their brief. If they look at the 21 language referred to the people in Section 52-B, because 22 it says once legislation is referred to the people, it 23 can only be voted on once -- it can only be enacted once 24 the people vote on it.

25 But here's the probably with their position, they

1 take the position that legislation is not referred to 2 the people until after the Secretary of State has 3 finished his certification process. But we know that 4 can't be the rule because that would allow legislation
5 to take effect in the meantime and that would vitiate 6 the referendum process. So the proper way of 7 understanding the Secretary's review process is that the 8 automatic suspension happens if petitions are filed by 9 the 90 day mark. When the Secretary reviews it, if the 10 Secretary makes the determination that those petitions 11 were legally insufficient, they didn't have enough valid
12 signatures or they didn't have enough valid signatures 13 from six of the eight congressional districts or there's 14 some others than constitutional deficiency, that means 15 that those petitions did not satisfy the constitutional 16 and statutory prerequisites for a referendum. And it 17 means that this is essentially the referendum is null 18 and void dating back to the moment of suspension. The 19 Secretary's review is nunc pro tunc, which I confess is 20 a phrase I have never said before in my life but it 21 applies directly here. It's review that happens after 22 the fact that dates back to the time of the submission 23 of the petitions. Because if those petitions were 24 legally insufficient, that means that the measure was 25 never properly referred to the people and the suspension

1 is lifted. But until that certification is completed
2 the suspension has to remain in effect. Again, and I -- 3 I know I sound like a broken record, because if that 4 were not the rule then the legislation would by 5 operation of law, automatically take effect and that 6 would defeat the whole purpose of having a referendum 7 right.

8 And, Your Honor, you don't have to take my word
9 for it the Missouri Supreme Court more than 100 years 10 ago explored this very same dynamic. And that case is 11 State ex re Kemper v. Carter, that 165 SW reporter 773.

12 If nothing else today, I want to encouraged the 13 Court to read that opinion closely. That's not always 14 fun. It is written in a very stilted and antiquated 15 style of legal writing, but still it's an oldie but a 16 goody, because the Missouri Supreme Court previewed many 17 of the same arguments the State is making today and 18 dismantled them one by one including this one.

19 The Kemper decision they explained that the 20 review that you take, the Secretary's review operates as 21 an essentially an after-the-fact review to determine 22 whether or not those petitions were properly submitted.

23 But they go out of their way in that opinion to say, 24 that the suspension has to occur before the 25 certification process is completed. And we quote this

1 language in our pretrial brief in the introduction.
2 They make the point that it would be, they say the 3 flimsyish shadow or some such language, but they 4 basically say it would make no sense. In fact, it would 5 be counter to the very purpose of the referendum if the 6 Secretary could delay the review process and allow the 7 law to go into effect just because there was some manner 8 of delay. It doesn't even have to be intentional delay.
9 It's just any delay that would allow legislation to take 10 effect would destroy the referendum power. And the 11 court recognized this more than a hundred years ago and 12 that's why they explained this general principle that 13 the Secretary's review dates back to the time of 14 submission and that's why the Secretary is empower to 15 unsuspend legislation. Because if legislation the was 16 not properly referred to the people when those 17 submission -- when those petitions were submitted then 18 Section 52-B doesn't apply and the Secretary can 19 unsuspend it and there's no industrial problem with 20 that. But that's the way the system has to work.
21 And again, I'm going to keep emphasizing this, in 22 part because I have read the briefs filed by Defendants 23 and Intervenor. They have not once addressed this 24 critical point that their theory allows legislation to 25 go into effect, only to later be suspended and then

1 voted on by the people.

2 THE COURT: So in Kemper v. Carter it says must 3 be timely.

4 MR. HAWLEY: Uh-huh.

5 THE COURT: And how are you timely?

6 MR. HAWLEY: It's timely because in this case in 7 particular, the deadline for submitting the HB 1 8 referendum petition was December 11, 2025, 90 days 9 after --

10 THE COURT: What if we don't know that?

11 MR. HAWLEY: I'm sorry?

12 THE COURT: What if the timeliness is unknown?

13 MR. HAWLEY: I don't think that would ever be 14 possible because the timeliness is set by the 15 Constitution. It's 90 days after adjournment. And 16 adjournment is a matter of public record, the 17 Legislature has to adjourn. So we're always going to 18 know.

19 THE COURT: So what does legal mean, timely and 20 legal?

21 MR. HAWLEY: Legal means compliant with the 22 statutory and constitutional requirements for a 23 referendum. I'll give -- I'm sorry. Please.

24 THE COURT: What if we don't know if it's legal 25 or not?

1 MR. HAWLEY: The automatic suspension happens, 2 and that's why the Secretary has a statutory -- there's 3 a very detailed statutory process to allow him, first,
4 to assess the constitutionality of the referendum.
5 That's Section 116.120. And then to determine the 6 sufficiency. Because it does have that word
7 "sufficient." But Carter -- if you read on in Kemper, 8 it also discusses that there has to be a presumption, a 9 prima facie case of sufficiency upon submission because, 10 otherwise, we would have the problem that the State has 11 created here, where a law could go into effect even 12 though it's been properly referred to the people.
13 So the use of the word "timely," it -- it -- it's 14 not saying it's -- the rule that's announced in that 15 case is not that there must be definite proof of 16 timeliness, sufficiency and legality at the -- at the 17 time of the submission. It just means that to be 18 properly referred to the people you have to satisfy all 19 three of those conditions in determining whether or not 20 those conditions were satisfied at the time of filing, 21 happens afterwards when the Secretary undertakes his 22 review process.
23 And this also makes sense because those 90-day
24 deadlines are set by the Constitution. It would make no 25 sense -- and we are not suggesting this, despite what

1 the State says in its brief. We're not suggesting that 2 the Secretary has to satisfy those -- has to confirm 3 those three prerequisites and undertake the review
4 process in Chapter 116 by the 90 day deadline as well.
5 That is not our position. The system is set up so that 6 they don't need to rush. They have until August to 7 certify the petition, which is well after the 90-day 8 automatic effectiveness of legislation.

9 The reason there for that gap is because it's 10 designed to give the Secretary sufficient time to do the 11 review process, to make sure that the sub-- petitions 12 that were submitted by the deadline are proper, and that 13 will determine whether or not the suspension continues 14 through the vote or if it was not properly referred and 15 the suspension is lifted, and then the law would take 16 effect. But that -- this -- that doesn't change the 17 fact that that suspension has to happen at 90 days 18 because otherwise the law would take effect and the 19 referendum power would lose its meaning.

20 I'm sorry. I'm just reviewing here.

21 So the State has called our position here
22 implausible. But I think their position is a 23 nonstarter. Again, because it does not reconcile the 24 fact that legislation can't take effect before the 25 people vote it up or voted it down. Our position here

1 reconciles these various things in a way that makes 2 sense. And again, this is what Kemper recognized more 3 than a century ago.

4 And the Moore case as well, State ex rel Moore v.
5 Toberman which I mentioned earlier, that gets in this as 6 well. Because they mentioned that a referendum petition 7 that was found to be legally insufficient was not 8 suspended. That again, reflects the fact that this 9 review process happens after the fact that it dates back 10 to the time of submission so that the Secretary can 11 determine essentially whether the suspension continues 12 through a proper referendum vote or if no proper 13 referendum has been started, then the suspension is 14 lifted.

15 And the timing of that process is at the 16 Secretary's direction and discretion. He gets to decide 17 how long it takes. And he also gets to decide you -- 18 the various tools, and we can briefly review those, 19 because I do think it's important here. Because one of 20 the big arguments that's made on the other side, both 21 the State and the Intervenor briefs, is that this 22 process might get room for abuse.

23 We've heard some hypotheticals, even in our last 24 hearing, what happens if someone signs 50,000 pages with 25 their own name, what happens if it's just scribbles,

1 what happened if you don't have enough signatures?
2 Those are all valid well, those are -- I will say those 3 are not quite valid concerns, but those are 4 hypotheticals that have been put out here. But the 5 system is designed to minimize the effects of that 6 abuse.
7       Number 1, and perhaps most significantly
8 something that's been lost so far in this case, and I'm 9 taking this point directly from Kemper that 1914 case 10 they made the point that the fact that it's a crime to 11 forge or otherwise commit fraud in the referendum 12 process will deter fraud understandably such that when 13 the Secretary receives petitions by the deadline, they 14 can accept them with confidence that they are going to 15 be legal, sufficient and lawful.
16       And the particulars of that process have changed.
17 The statute is new. But it's still a -- it's a Class A 18 misdemeanor punishable by up to year in prison to forge
19 or commit fraud as part of the signature process, and it 20 says that on the petitions that people sign. So let's 21 not forget that there are concerns about 50,000 forged 22 signatures. If they're worried about someone who's 23 willing to accept I -- I'm not a criminal lawyer but 24 let's just say 50,000 years in prison for the sake of 25 forging a referendum petition, that's an outlandish

1 hypothetical and that should not be the tail that wags
2 the dog hair.
3 What's more, the statutory structure of 4 Chapter 116 and, actually, I believe that the 5 demonstrative that the State has -- will pass out, it
6 lays out it pretty nicely. But there are different 7 points of timing and different things that the Secretary 8 can do.

9 A brief intermission is probably much needed, but 10 the last page of that lays out Chapter 116 verification 11 process. And what it confirms is that there are many 12 things that the Secretary can do proactively and at 13 different times and at different speeds to make sure 14 that only properly referred legislation goes to the 15 people and by extension that only suspension is 16 minimized if indeed that suspension should not have 17 occurred.

18 So the first threshold is in -- I -- actually 19 that one is on I believe 116.110, if the submission 20 doesn't follow the submission rules, the Secretary can 21 kick the referendum right there. That can happen the 22 day of submission, if they didn't follow the actual 23 submission guidelines.

24 Next up, 116.120, the Secretary can make a 25 determination of constitutionality. That's what

1 Judge Bluestone and Mr. Capozzi and others were talking
2 about in that federal hearing. It's the self-help
3 remedy that the Secretary believes that a referendum 4 doesn't comply with the Missouri Constitution, and by 5 extension the U.S. Constitution, he can make a judgment 6 on that right away. There's no minimum time that has to 7 pass. He can do that immediately and make sure that an 8 unconstitutional referendum doesn't suspend legislation 9 that ought not to be suspended.

10 130.140, the process for -- you can do random 11 sampling of signatures. You can send either the full 12 signatures or the random sampler to the county officials 13 to verify that voters are the right ones. And, of 14 course, 116.150 gives the Secretary that final 15 certification power to either certify the referendum 16 sufficiency or certify its insufficiency.

17 And I want to emphasize, there is an outside 18 deadline for that process and, in this case, it's 19 August 4th, which is primary day. There is no minimum 20 time. So there's nothing stopping the Secretary, if he 21 feels that a referendum is improper, if he has 22 suspicions, if his staff has suspicions, they can 23 expedite this process, they can determine its 24 constitutionality at the very beginning of the process.
25 They have the tools that are needed to make sure that

1 fraud in the referendum process does not occur.

2 But those concerns about fraud cannot vitiate the 3 referendum by denying the people their right to have a 4 vote on the legislation that has not yet taken effect.

5 And that's why, again, we feel at that Plaintiffs'
6 position here best reconcile these various requirements.

7 We have the constitutional requirements and the 8 statutory requirements.

9 And reading the statute as being a review that 10 happens after suspension, is a way of making sure that 11 the process happens so that the people don't lose their 12 right to vote, to approve or deny legislation that has 13 not yet gone into effect. And again, the State has not 14 offered an explanation of how their position works when 15 we know that legislation can't take effect without 16 hollowing out the referendum power.

17 A few other points that the State raises in their 18 brief and Intervenors in their brief as well, in 19 response to Plaintiffs' argument and Plaintiffs' 20 position. The first is that they claim that our 21 position conflicts with precedent. Now, you've heard 22 enough from me to know that I think our position is 23 entirely consistent with precedent and we encourage the 24 Court to look at Kemper, look at Moore, look at the 25 other cases that have looked at some of these issues.

1 But the -- they point to two cases.

2 The first is the federal case, the one that we've

3 been talking about in the context of estoppel. But as 4 my colleague, Mr. Gordon, pointed out earlier, the 5 federal court did not have a holding there about the 6 automatic suspension of legislation because that issue

7 was not what he was focusing on. He was focusing on,

8 essentially, 116.120, the self-help remedy. Because

9 that federal case, just for context, that was a state --

10 a case brought by the General Assembly against People

11 Not Politicians claiming that the referendum itself

12 violates the U.S. Constitution under the theory that 13 referendum on congressional maps are inherently

14 unconstitutional because the election clause empowers

15 the Legislature to draw the maps of congressional lines.

16 I might be simplifying the issue there, but 17 that's a -- that's about the constitutionality of the 18 referendum itself. And, obviously, that's not an issue

19 before this court. But that's what they were looking

20 at. And Judge Bluestone concluded that the Secretary

21 has a way of dealing with that where he doesn't need to 22 call in a court. The Secretary, informed by the 23 Attorney General, can make a determination of 24 unconstitutionality under 116.120, and that is to use

25 the federal court's term, "decertify the petition." Say

1 that it's insufficient and then the suspension would end 2 once the process for judicial review happens.

3 Again, that's not what -- that's not an issue 4 here but that case, if anything shows, that this is how 5 the process is designed to work. The Secretary has the 6 ability to address whatever flaws that he or the 7 Attorney General might perceive in the referendum 8 process under these statutes, but that doesn't affect 9 the automatic suspension.

10 And other than taking some lines out of context 11 from the background section, Judge Bluestone in the 12 federal opinion never expressly said that automatic 13 suspension does not happen on the 90-day mark. He just 14 said that the Secretary can decertify a referendum later 15 on and make it go into effect and, with recertification, 16 it's just the process of issuing a certificate that the 17 referendum is insufficient. So we don't believe that 18 there's anything inconsistent with what we're saying and 19 what Judge Bluestone said in the federal case.

20 The other case that they point to is actually one
21 that Plaintiffs have been relying on, the Chugh
22 Transport case, which is a case from Cole County Circuit
23 Court in the early 1980s. That case was about trucking 24 legislation and there was a referendum on it. And the 25 plaintiffs in that case wanted a determination that the

1 law was not suspended because the Secretary
2 certification of signatures had not yet happened. And 3 the Court said no for the same reason that we said,
4 because the people's referendum right is too important 5 to allow laws to go into effect before they have their 6 say.

7 And now the State points out that, in that case, 8 the 116.120 certification had already happened. But 9 that opinion does not say that that certification is 10 required before suspension goes into effect. That's 11 just the facts there. And again, that can't be the rule 12 because there's no minimum deadlines here for 120 that 13 would allow the Secretary to, essentially, drag his 14 feet, decline to assert -- to issue a finding of 15 constitutionality and let legislation go into effect.
16 And that cannot be the rule. And so Chugh Transport 17 doesn't say as much either.

18 And their response to that point, Your Honor, 19 which is there's a risk that the Secretary could allow 20 legislation to go into effect by, essentially, taking 21 his time on the certification process. Their response
22 to that, and I quote is, "elections have consequences."
23 So they're -- as I understand their position, it's that 24 if the Secretary of State violates the people's 25 referendum rights by denying them their chance to vote

1 on legislation before it takes effect, the people can 2 just vote him out of the office at the next election.
3 But I am not aware of any authority from any 4 state or federal court that says that an elected 5 official can violate the people's constitutional rights 6 freely, just because there might be electoral 7 consequences down the road. If that were the rule, then 8 it would be impossible to prevail on a constitutional 9 challenge to something an elected official does.
10 Obviously, that's not the rule and that's not the rule 11 here. But ultimately, Chugh Transport doesn't even 12 reach that. It doesn't require that conclusion anyway.

13 I just want to point that out.
14 The State has also said that we misunderstand 15 what it means for something to be referred to the 16 people, because they say only the Secretary can refer 17 something to the people. We don't disagree with that.
18 The Secretary refers legislation to the people. But 19 again, that does not change the fact that the 20 legislation that might be referred, ultimately, if it's 21 certified, is suspended after 90 days. Again, that has 22 to be in the rule, based on what we know from the 23 Missouri Supreme Court and the text of Section 52-B.

24 So our position is con-- our position is 25 consistent with the constitutional text. It's

1 consistent with this fundamental imperative that laws
2 cannot go into effect until the people have their say.
3 And that the inverse of that in a sense, that 4 legislation once it's gone into effect can no longer be 5 subject to the referendum power. And it's consistent 6 with both the federal case and Chugh Transport.

7 The State and Intervene point to some other 8 states that have different rules. I would submit that 9 there's no need to look at Maryland, Wyoming or any 10 other state that they cite to because the Missouri
11 Constitution, Missouri statutes and Missouri case law 12 give us the answers to these questions that we need.

13 But I will say the fact that other states might do it 14 differently, that's fine.

15 There is -- the -- this is just the way that 16 Missouri courts -- that the Missouri Constitutions
17 referendum power is effectuated with automatic 18 suspension before effective date of legislation to 19 ensure that the people can vote it up or vote it down.
20 That's just the rule in Missouri. The fact that other 21 states might have different applications there for their 22 referendum power, it doesn't really have any relevance
23 when we have Missouri authorities on the point here.

24 The State has said that our position is absurd
25 and I think obviously we disagree with that. We think

1 that it's just the best way of reconciling all of these 2 moving pieces. But we also note that prior Secretaries
3 of State informed by the prior Attorneys General have 4 adopted the view that Plaintiffs have here. This 5 happened in 2018 related to legislation about Missouri's 6 Right to Work law. It happened in the 1980s under 7 Secretary Kirkpatrick under that trucking legislation.
8 They took the position that both of those laws were 9 suspended upon submission of the cert-- of signatures
10 before the certifica-- signature certification process 11 was completed.

12 So far from absurd, this is practice. And 13 Defendants try to waive that away by saying, well, the 14 Secretary of State isn't the ultimate legal authority in 15 this state. But that's like me saying 'my dog is not 16 intelligent because I beat her three games out of five 17 when we play chess.' If she still wins the other two 18 games, that is very significant of something. And the 19 fact that prior Secretaries of State have adopted our 20 view shows that this is not an absurd theory. This is 21 Missouri practice. And again, it comes from a place of 22 reason otherwise legislation can take effect before the 23 people vote on it and that can't be the rule.

24 As I mentioned there fears about a major -- a 25 minority of people freezing a law unjustifiable with a

1 legally insufficient petition, again, the structure of 2 the statutory review process and the fact that it is a 3 crime to defraud the State through the referendum
4 process is the deterrent needed so that the Secretary
5 can confidently suspend the legislation after 90 days
6 and then complete his review. And again, the Kemper 7 case from 1914 makes that point quite clear.

8 And again, we are not asking the Secretary to 9 finish that review process in 90 days. In this case he 10 would two days because the PNP petitions were submitted 11 two days before the deadline. The whole point of our 12 position and the automatic suspension by 90 days is that 13 the Secretary does not need to have an impossible task.
14 The timing and implementation of that review process is 15 at his discretion and he can make those determinations.

16 And again, a contrary position would be 17 inherently unconstitutional because it would allow the 18 legislation to take effect before the people have their 19 say.

20 And again, this is case underscores why this is a 21 rule. Because were dealing with a map. And maps have 22 to be applied by a date certain. Otherwise, you know, 23 that's just the reality of election administration.

24 THE COURT: Why?

25 MR. HAWLEY: Because things have to done to

1 ensure that implementation of a map can't happen on a
2 dime because it requires -- to make sure that the voters
3 get the correct ballot. To make sure that the proper 4 voter files are properly updated with new district
5 boundaries. There just -- there are technocratic 6 procedures that have to be done to implement a map.

7 THE COURT: You have to answer by February 24, 8 why does that date matter?

9 MR. HAWLEY: February 24, and I'll -- absolutely, 10 Your Honor. So February 24th as we've mentioned is the 11 opening of the candidate filing deadline. Our position
12 is not that that's the drop dead date to have Missouri 13 map. We just think that it would be -- it would make 14 most sense for candidates to know by the time they need 15 to start filing their candidacy materials which 16 districts they're going to be running in. That's not an 17 election administration deadline. And again, Your 18 Honor, I don't know what the deadline is. But here's 19 the problem, the statutory review deadline is August 20 4th. That's the same day as the primary. So if the 21 Secretary's position is correct, that he has until 22 August 4th and not until that day, would HB 1 suspended, 23 I would submit that it is a practical impossibility to 24 have the certification process completed on August 4th, 25 have HB 1 suspended on August 4th and do on that same

1 day hold the primary under the old map lines. That's 2 just not possible. And there's some daylight there. I
3 don't -- again, I don't know what the date is when --

4 THE COURT: This whole time we've been arguing or 5 been discussing the need for February 24 to expedited
6 discovery, do all of these things in a rush manner 7 because there's importance of February 24th.

8 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

9 THE COURT: And so is the importance that people
10 know --

11 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

12 THE COURT: -- by February 24th? But what if it
13 ends up the signatures aren't there? Isn't it the exact 14 same harm the other decision that people don't know?

15 I see what you're saying.

16 MR. HAWLEY: Yes. Yes.

17 THE COURT: I don't see how one harm outweighs 18 the other harm. Aren't they equal harms in this 19 situation?

20 MR. HAWLEY: They are not, Your Honor. Because 21 thumb is on the scale of the referendum right. They are 22 not two equal harms. Because the harm of vitiating a 23 fundamental constitutional right, outweighs the harms 24 that are inconvenience that comes to candidates, even 25 voters and election officials of having to implement a

1 new map later on in the process then they might 2 otherwise prefer. Because your -- the difference is 3 inconvenience and confusion on one hand weighed against 4 a fundamental constitutional right. And when you have a 5 right on one side of the scale, that's the one that 6 weighs more heavily. And again, that's why we have 7 proposed our position here, which is it has to be 8 automatically suspended to make sure that the people's 9 referendum right isn't accidentally vitiated by allowing 10 a law to go into effect.
11 And I'll repeat something that we said at the 12 last hearing, Your Honor. The Secretary is empower to 13 make immediate determinations, short of the full 14 signature review process if he has a valid basis for 15 determining that a petition is insufficient and that 16 HB 1 should not be suspended. The fact that that has 17 not happened yet is the Secretary's choice. We are not 18 looking to control that choice. But in reality is the 19 statute leaves it to his discretion. And if he wants to 20 slow walk the process, then any inconvenience that's 21 ultimately imposed on candidates or election officials 22 is the Secretary's responsibility. It's not our 23 Plaintiffs because they're only looking to ensure that 24 their fundamental rights are vindicated through this 25 legislation.

1 And that actually brings up a kind of important 2 point about delay here, which has been raised in these 3 briefs as well. We do think that delay is against -- is 4 not on our side here. Delay should be minimized here, 5 because it would just -- again, make the most sense for 6 everybody, voters, candidates, election workers, the 7 Secretary's office, everyone to have certainty to which 8 map should be in place as soon as possible.

9 And originally, in their motion to dismiss
10 briefing, the State suggested that there would no 11 problem with delay here. And in their pretrial brief 12 the State also says that that process is still 13 happening. But I'm a little skeptical of that for two 14 reasons.

15 The first is, we have exhibits in the record from 16 our preliminary injunction hearing which have now been 17 admitted. The Secretary of State and the Attorney 18 General has stated publicly that they are delaying this 19 process to protects the HB 1 map. That is not my 20 opinion. That is something that the Secretary of State 21 stated to NPR and to other media outlets. So you don't 22 have to take my word for it, that delay is happening
23 here. The Secretary has made that position clear.

24 And even if we haven't -- he haven't though,
25 they've taken the position that the 116.120 review

1 hasn't happened yet. It's a quick refresher, that's the 2 self-help remedy that Judge Bluestone in the federal 3 case focused on when he concluded that that case was not 4 ripe because the Secretary could fix any problem himself 5 immediately at any time. Judge Bluestone gave the 6 Secretary the green light if he felt that the referendum
7 was unconstitutional to make that determination right 8 away. He -- the State has taken the position that he 9 has not.

10 And I don't know why that is, if they believe 11 this referendum is unconstitutional. The only 12 solution -- or our only answer to that question I can 13 find is that they are trying to delay this process to 14 the point where it's too late to change the map. That's 15 gamesmanship on the Secretary's side. That is no 16 reflection on the referendum right. And again, that 17 should not be the tail that wags the dog here. That 18 people's fundamental rights need to be protected if they 19 have any meaning.

20 And that requires that HB 1 be suspended because, 21 otherwise, as the Kemper court observed more than a 22 century ago, they would leave room for abuse in the 23 process on the Secretary's side because delay and 24 certification might serve to allow laws to go into 25 effect even though they're subject to the referendum

1 power and cannot go into effect.

2 The specter of Purcell has been raised in this 3 case. And -- oh, I'm sorry. Apologies. A brief word
4 about Purcell. That's the doctrine that says the Courts 5 can't get involved in litigation too close to an 6 election because it risks creating confusion. Now, we 7 submit there is no Purcell problem now because we've 8 asked for a resolution by February 24th. Even if this 9 case is not finally resolved, we do not accept that 10 there would be a Purcell problem. But let us point out 11 that Purcell isn't really applicable here because 12 Purcell is about a Court coming in and changing rules on 13 the eve of an election. We're asking this Court to 14 determine simply which is the operative map right now.
15 There's a dispute about that. Under Missouri precedent, 16 it would be the old map. Under the Secretary's view
17 it's HB 1. So we don't know -- there's uncertainly
18 right now about which map is in effect. So the normal 19 considerations of Purcell, which is interfering and 20 changing rules at the last minute, isn't quite a good 21 fit here because we're asking the Court to decide early 22 which is the proper map, and that why we have sought 23 expedition in this case, because the sooner that 24 decision is made, the better it will be for everybody.

25 And but -- and yet -- and even though the State

1 has suggested in their motion to dismiss briefing that 2 Purcell would not be an issue here, that the Secretary
3 could wait until August 4th to certify and then suspend 4 HB 1 there.

5 Again, that just -- that position lacks any 6 credibility. It just doesn't make any sense. By 7 August 4, primary day, you can't change the map. But 8 that is the outside deadlines for the Secretary
9 certification process. That just underscores this whole 10 point that you can't tie the suspension of preferred 11 legislation to complete the certification process, 12 because it would allow laws to go into effect and when 13 you're dealing with a congressional map, it makes that 14 problem all the more apparent because eventually the map 15 can't be changed. And it certainly can't be changed by 16 the deadline for the Secretary's certification here.

17 And so again, this problem with delay is 18 something that's been an issue in this case. It still 19 is and that's why we urge a quick resolution of this 20 case.

21 I've been going on for quite some time, Your 22 Honor, but I just have a few last minute points, a few 23 of the other ancillary issues that have raised in 24 briefing heading into trial.

25 The first is standing. We talk about this a lot

1 at the last hearing. I don't want to belabor the points
2 especially given that the Court has denied those motions
3 to dismiss. But we do believe our Plaintiffs readily 4 have standing here. They are bringing this case on 5 behalf of their own constitutional rights. That is an 6 individual right that each voter in Missouri holds as an 7 individual. And any violation of that right is a 8 personal injury to a voter. Again, the fact that all 9 voters might have that injury, doesn't make it 10 generalized because it's a direct injury to a personal 11 right that our Plaintiffs hold. Therefore, they have a 12 concrete injury. This is not an abstracted injury about 13 the conduct of government. This is something that's 14 individual personal to them and we allege is currently 15 being violated by the Secretary's actions and the State 16 implementation of HB 1. And we, again, believe this 17 case is ripe because that is injury is on ongoing. If 18 law -- if under the Missouri Constitution laws have to 19 be suspended at 90 days and HB 1 was not suspended, then 20 there's an ongoing violation of the rights that is 21 happening now.

22 We are not challenging the certification process.
23 We are not rushing the certification process. We're not 24 seeking judicial review of the certification process.
25 That's down the road. This case is about a preliminary

1 question of what happens to HB 1 in the meantime. That 2 issue is ripe for adjudication now.
3 Intervenor suggested that we have an adequate 4 remedy at law our plaintiff, such that a permanent 5 injunction is not appropriate. But they cite to the 6 judicial review of the certification process. So that 7 argument fails for the same reason. We're not looking 8 at the certification process right now. We're looking 9 at what happens before then. There's an ongoing 10 violation of our cons-- our Plaintiffs constitutional 11 rights, that's a irreparable and non compensable harm 12 and certainly there's no statute or other remedy that 13 would allow plaintiffs to vindicate their rights short 14 of litigation like this.

15 And the last thing I'm going to talk about is the 16 estoppel question, which we've already hashed out in 17 great detail. I adopt everything that Mr. Gordon said 18 about the fact that no concession was made in the 19 federal case. Even if it were, it would not be the sort 20 of concession that estoppel would be applicable to, even 21 if it were, even under their theory of common funding.

22 There's no case that would find an estoppel 23 relationship there. Estoppel is about preventing 24 parties usually from making money by committing a fraud 25 on the Court. That is miles away from the case of two

1 plaintiffs, individuals seeking to vindicate their 2 constitutional rights. And yet the State has now
3 pivoted once again in their pretrial brief to make a 4 pretty extraordinary suggestion that everyone who signed
5 the HB 1 petition is estopped from making an argument
6 that's inconsistent with what they view as PNP's 7 argument in the federal case.

8 Again, there is no authority that would allow for 9 such an expansive application of estoppel, by the same 10 reasoning that would suggest that no one in the State of 11 Missouri could ever take a legal position inconsistent
12 with the Attorney General because the Attorney General 13 ostensibly represents the people of Missouri. But 14 that's just -- that would be I think clearly absurd.
15 And this is no less absurd because there's, just -- 16 again, the principle the estoppel is applied very 17 carefully. The fact that our Plaintiff signed a 18 petition doesn't mean that they don't get to vindicate
19 their own referendum rights. And the St. Louis 20 Typographical Union case, which they cite for that, 21 doesn't saying to the contrary.

22 In that case, the Union was estopped because the 23 Union itself had no interest in this litigation they 24 brought. They were merely serving as a proxy for their 25 members who had already failed in lit-- in litigation.

1 Then the Plaintiffs asked their -- the members asked the 2 Union to bring a case and take a contrary position.
3 That is not this case, because our Plaintiffs are 4 seeking to vindicate their own rights, not PNP's, and so 5 St. Louis Typographical has no application here, because 6 this isn't a case where someone's acting as a proxy to 7 vindicate someone else's rights. Our Plaintiffs are 8 looking after their own referendum rights.

9 The State also suggested that there is sufficient 10 circumstantial evidence for an estoppel ruling here.
11 They picked at various things. They've listed them in 12 their brief under a theory. Again, there is absolutely 13 no proof, no evidence that yet been seen that our 14 Plaintiffs and PNP or anyone affiliated with PNP have a 15 connection worthy or that would merits a finding of 16 estoppel. There's been no collusion, no coordination, 17 no funding, no direction. No one is in cahoots with 18 anyone else. They are just two separate entities.
19 There's been no evidence other than their speculation 20 that there might --

21 THE COURT: How do you know that?

22 MR. HAWLEY: I'm sorry?

23 THE COURT: How do you know that?

24 MR. HAWLEY: Because we've seen the record. Our 25 Plaintiffs swore in their deposition -- I'm sorry in

1 their discovery responses and at depositions that they 2 stand by those discovery responds that PNP is not 3 funding this litigation. PNP in third party discovery 4 confirmed that they are not funding this litigation or 5 directing it or anything else. So if you look at the 6 totality of the -- of the materials in the record, 7 discovery responses, depositions, briefing and what we 8 and my colleagues have said at the hearings, there is 9 nothing in the record to suggest that there's any kind 10 of collusion or coordination between PNP and us. It's 11 all based on the theory of estoppel that wouldn't even 12 have merit in the first place. And I want to draw the 13 Court's attention to Taylor v. Sturgell, which is a U.S.
14 supreme court case that -- 15 THE COURT: Sturgell?
16 MR. HAWLEY: Yes, S-t-u-r-g-e-l-l. That's 553 US 17 880. The Supreme Court there said that courts should be 18 cautious about finding estoppel based on the 19 relationship of non-parties. And they said, quote, "a 20 mere whiff of tactical maneuvering will not suffice to 21 justify a ruling of estoppel." We don't even have 22 evidence of tactical man-- we don't even have a whiff of 23 tactical maneuvering here. All we have or -- is the 24 State's speculation. And, as Mr. Gordon pointed out, we 25 have gone out of our way, and PNP and the third party

1 deponents did as well, to confirmed that there is no
2 tactical maneuvering and there is no connection here.
3 There's no evidence of collusion whatsoever.

4 Estoppel is an equitable doctrine. It would be 5 decidedly inequitable, I would suggest in this case, to 6 deny our Plaintiffs the opportunity to vindicate their 7 individual rights based on something that allegedly 8 happened in a federal case based on the organizers of 9 the petition. There is no case that they have cited, 10 and certainly no case that we have seen that would urge 11 a court to apply estoppel in that case.

12 So instead, the State is asking for an adverse 13 inference to be drawn against us. That would be equally 14 inequitable, because I don't know of any case where you 15 would justifying an adverse inference based on the 16 absence of information. Here there has been no lying, 17 there has been no spoliation of evidence. There hasn't 18 even been a refusal to testify as in JAR which is a case
19 that the State cites in their brief.

20 Our Plaintiffs testified and the third parties'
21 deponents testified that there is no connection here.
22 We've all made the relevant point abundantly clear. We 23 have declined to provide funding information based on 24 our belief that that information is irrelevant and, more 25 to the point, protected by the First Amendment. The

1 First Amendment privilege exists to ensure that 2 individual and entities association rights are not 3 chilled by undue interference.

4 I can only imagine the chilling effect that would 5 happen if an adverse inference could be drawn by a court 6 based on a party's good-faith indication of their First 7 Amendment rights. That is exactly what the First 8 Amendment privilege is designed to protect, so there 9 is -- there is absolutely no grounds for any kind of 10 adverse inference here because the record demonstrates 11 that there has been no coordination and no collusion.

12 Ultimately with, Your Honor, I'll finish where I 13 began. I've talked a lot, but I don't want to lose 14 sight of the fact that this is a fairly straightforward
15 question. We have very helpful Missouri Supreme Court 16 cases. We have the text of the Constitution. We have 17 what prior Secretaries of State and Attorney Generals
18 have done and all of that is consistent with Plaintiffs' 19 position. This has to be the rule. Legislation has to 20 be suspended automatically before legislation goes into 21 effect because otherwise the referendum right would be 22 hollowed out beyond recognition.

23 And so we rest on our briefing and the evidence 24 in the record. And with that I think with Court's time, 25 we urge the Court to issue an order, a permanent

1 injunction and final judgment declaring that HB 1 is 2 suspended until the constitutional referendum process is 3 completed. And that can either be the final vote or 4 ultimately a finding of insufficiency by the Secretary
5 of State's office that's upheld on judicial review.
6 Either way that's the consummation of the referendum
7 process. Until that time HB 1 is suspended. And we ask
8 the Court and join the Secretary of State and the State 9 from enforcing HB 1's map until that process is 10 completed.
11 Thank you.

12 THE COURT: So I like to play pinball. All 13 right. It's a game I was really good at. And at the 14 Safeway Store, when I was young I'd go down to Safeway
15 and I'd play Elvira. Now, I'm there and all of a sudden 16 there's one of those BLT machines now, right. Nothing 17 to be close to controversy. There's discussion on this 18 right now. Well, I decided I want to play that. All 19 right. Now they pass a law saying they're legal. But 20 my wife doesn't like that and she started a petition.
21 And there's -- and now they've submitted signatures to 22 the State. Though the State says it's legal, there's 23 reference saying it shouldn't be legal. If I'm playing 24 that, under your theory I should be -- I could be 25 arrested for that now. Right. I'm doing something

1 illegal. So where is the problem there?

2 MR. HAWLEY: I want to make sure I got this 3 hypothetical correct. So these machines were legal --

4 THE COURT: They were illegal.

5 MR. HAWLEY: They were illegal.

6 THE COURT: They made them now legal. But 7 there's been a referendum filed saying no, no.

8 MR. HAWLEY: This is exactly the point of why we 9 have to be right, Your Honor. If the Legislature --

10 Legislature passes laws saying that it's illegal that 11 law would not take effect until had 90 days.

12 THE COURT: They say it's legal.

13 MR. HAWLEY: Sorry. If they say it's legal, that 14 legality would not take effect until 90 days after the 15 adjournment of that session. So if your wife submits 16 those petitions before that 90 days to ensure that the 17 machines are still illegal, that would preserve the 18 status quo, pending the referendum process, because the 19 legality would never have taken effect, because it 20 would -- the automatic suspension would have prevented 21 that from happening. So this ensures security.

22 The bigger problem would be, if the Secretary 23 were right, here's what would happen: You would be 24 playing -- the law would go into effect. The pinball 25 machines would become legal. You'd be playing pinball.

1 Then the certification would happen, and then the 2 pinball machines would be illegal. All of a sudden,
3 based on the Secretary's timing of the certification 4 process. You can imagine how confusing that would be.
5 Setting aside the referendum right means that 6 legislation can take effect. This would be the back and 7 forth. State ex rel Moore v. Toberman talks about this.
8 It says it'd be very -- there'd be great mischief would 9 result if that were the rule, because laws would be 10 turned on and off like a light switch. It would be 11 confusing.

12 In the case of a congressional map, it would be 13 irreparable because the map once in place has to stay in 14 place at some point. But to your point, there would be 15 this back and forth of whether that illegal or not and,
16 you could be at risk about not knowing what the status 17 of what the law is, as could the proprietors of the 18 Safeway who put the pinball machine in their store.

19 Ours -- the way we have conceded -- I caught 20 Plaintiffs' position, but this is -- was the State's 21 position up until this last year, prior Secretaries of 22 State, prior Attorney Generals and the Missouri Supreme 23 Court, our position -- and I want to run though it 24 again, because I think it's quite telling. The machines 25 are -- are illegal. The legislation decides they should

1 be lawful. That lawfulness would take effect after 2 90 days.
3 Your wife submits the petition. That freezes
4 implementation of that law. It delays the effective 5 date until after the referendum is completed so that 6 way, there is consistency. There's no back and forth.
7 The machines remain illegal. If that referendum vote
8 succeeds, they'll stay illegal. If the referendum vote 9 fails, the machines are lawful and you can play them as 10 much as you want. And there's the middle ground.
11 If the Secretary -- I -- I'm reluctant to suggest 12 this. If those petitions that your wife submitted are 13 not sufficient, which I'm sure they would be, they 14 absolutely would be, but if they were not and the 15 Secretary determines -- makes that determination and a 16 Court upholds that finding, then the legislation would 17 go into effect and the machines would be legal. But the 18 whole point of this is to avoid the back and forth and 19 confusion that would result if the Secretary's position 20 were correct.

21 But -- I'm sorry, please.

22 THE COURT: But you said if it's found to be 23 sufficient. Right? But in the case you keep citing, 24 the hundred-year-old case --

25 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

1 THE COURT: -- Kemper v. Carter, it says timely,
2 legal and sufficient.

3 MR. HAWLEY: Right.

4 THE COURT: And so what you just said is that, if 5 it's deemed to be sufficient, which either sufficient 6 has meaning or does not have meaning --

7 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

8 THE COURT: -- so the archaic language of the 9 case -- and you've told me that, if I'm reading through 10 it. But you're trying to say --

11 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

12 THE COURT: -- here sufficiency is required, but 13 it appears it doesn't matter. That's just extra 14 verbiage. It's this case and it's not --

15 MR. HAWLEY: It does not because in order for -- 16 in order for a -- in order for that suspension to be 17 lawful and for the suspension to be continued through

18 the referendum process, petitions need to be timely, 19 legal and sufficient. So that's not ** enter verbiage.

20 That is the reality. But again, the case goes on to 21 describe the presumption of sufficiency, timeliness and 22 adequacy that detaches upon submission as a necessity of 23 the process. And then the Secretary certification of 24 that happened afterwards and, essentially, dates back to 25 the time of -- of the -- of the filing.

1 So I think -- again, I think what we're saying is 2 consistent here. We're not denying that suspension
3 presupposes those things. It's just that there's 4 essentially a presumption. It's a rebuttable
5 presumption that the Secretary can rebut through the 6 review process. But again, this has to be the mechanics
7 here. Because otherwise we have the situation where a 8 law goes into effect even though the people haven't 9 voted on it yet.

10 And that does remind me, Your Honor, there's one 11 other check on the system here. The Secretary can make 12 sure that legislation, that it isn't unduly suspended by 13 confirming whether or not a petition is sufficient or 14 not.

15 The Legislature also has a check. If there's 16 emergency legislation or certain other pieces of 17 legislation to be constitutional criteria, the 18 referendum process doesn't even apply. So there's no 19 concern here. Let's say the Legislature made the 20 decision that those pinball machines were very important 21 to the State's economy and the enjoyment of its citizens 22 and declared it an emergency that pinball machines have 23 to be legal. I'm not sure if that would be necessarily 24 a proper conclusion to make, but this -- the Legislature 25 can pass legislation with certain emergency provisions

1 to make sure that it does not get suspended by the 2 referendum process. So if something has to happen, if 3 it's an emergency, the Legislature can make that 4 determination and ensure that the legislation isn't 5 subject to the referendum process. That's not the case 6 here. There's nothing in HB 1 that triggers those 7 safeguards. But the point is, there are safeguards in 8 process. That's what Carter talked about, so that we 9 can presume timeliness, sufficiency and adequacy. Law 10 can be suspended and then the Secretary undertakes the 11 review process and confirms that that suspension is 12 proper and that legislation is referred to the people 13 for their up or down vote.

14 THE COURT: Okay.

15 MR. HAWLEY: Thank you.

16 MR. CAPOZZI: Your Honor, do you want to launch 17 right into this or -- I just fair warning, it might take 18 a little while. There's a lot to respond to and just 19 wanted to check if you wanted a break or if anybody else 20 needs one.

21 THE COURT: What do you all want to do? I'm good 22 for -- I'm not good until 3:00.

23 MR. CAPOZZI: I'm happy to proceed.

24 MR. GORDON: We're happy to proceed. Just a 25 housekeeping matter, I think what we talked about before

1 with the objections to the documents, I'd just like to 2 confirm that we can just have a standing objection to 3 the extent that counsel refers to the exhibits, 4 transcripts that we've lodged our objections to, instead 5 me interrupting counsel every time we mention those.

6 THE COURT: It works for me.

7 MR. CAPOZZI: Yes, works for me.

8 THE COURT: You want to take a quick restroom
9 break before you get started?

10 I don't know how you guys are doing.

11 You okay?

12 THE COURT REPORTER: Uh-huh.

13 MR. CAPOZZI: All right, Your Honor. I apologize
14 in advance. This may go a little long but there's a lot 15 it go through.

16 I want to start, though, with what we're not 17 talking about. Because, frankly, I think a lot of my 18 friend's arguments were a red herring. He says that 19 this case is about the right to referendum and whether 20 it means anything. He says, if the State wins, that the 21 right to referendum doesn't mean anything. And that's 22 clearly not true. I think we actually have some common 23 ground on this point.

24 This case is not about whether the people will 25 get to vote on HB 1. The Secretary's certification

1 decision has not happened yet. If the Secretary
2 certifies the referendum, the people will get to vote.
3 HB 1 does not only apply for 2026. It applies for 2028
4 and it applies for all elections until the General
5 Assembly redirects again, which would be after 2030.
6 And so the people will get their vote.
7 This case is not about whether the people will 8 get their vote. This case is not even about whether HB 9 1 is frozen between, you know, for a certain amount of 10 time before the people get their vote. If the Secretary 11 certifies this referendum, say for example, in June.
12 I'll agree that HB 1 is frozen and cannot be used for 13 the 2026 elections. And so those two things are not at 14 issue.
15 And frankly, that's mostly what the referendum 16 right is about. Do the people get a vote? No. What 17 this case is about is for a temporary period of time.
18 Do we assume that merely submitting a petition, an 19 unverified petition with unverified signatures, does 20 that automatically block a law enacted by the people's 21 elected representatives? I want to give a hypothetical,
22 which I think is similar to your pinball hypothetical, 23 but it's just this case. It's a hypothetical. It's 24 this case.
25 People Not Politicians has submitted a referendum

1 petition against House Bill 1. They have to get a 2 certain number of signatures in six congressional 3 districts. You know, there have been allegations today 4 of delay by the State and by the Secretary but, as the 5 State has pointed out before, the Secretary very 6 promptly referred this referendum to the 116 local 7 election districts, the counties, and I think it's 8 Jackson County has its own district. All around the 9 State local election officials are going through the 10 exhaustive process of looking at these signatures.
11 You have to make sure that they're registered 12 voters. You have to make sure that there's not 13 duplication. You have to check the signatures for 14 signature matching to make sure there's no fraud. And 15 this is an important process, Your Honor. You know, the 16 exhibits that the State wants to submit or we're asking 17 the Court effectively to -- you know, these are 18 certified documents. These are the certified results
19 from the Secretary of State. These show very high 20 invalidity rates for past referendum petitions.
21 In the -- in the recent past, within the last ten 22 years has high as 40 percent of the signatures submitted 23 with referenda petitions have been invalid. If that's 24 true here, anything close to that number is true here, 25 People Not Politicians will probably not have enough

1 signatures for their referendum to qualify.

2 And so here's the hypothetical: Let's say that 3 in July, when the exhaustive signature review process
4 finishes, it turns out that there weren't enough
5 signatures. It turns out that People Not Politicians 6 did not have enough signatures in one or two of the 7 congressional districts. Under my friend's theory, that 8 means that HB 1, a law duly enacted by a majority of the 9 people's elected representatives and signed by the 10 Governor, can't be used for elections this year based on 11 an invalid pile of signatures.

12 And so my friend says this case is about 13 democracy. I agree. But I think democracy points in 14 the other direction. Democracy is whether laws enacted 15 by the people's elected representatives are going to be 16 enforced. And in my hypothetical that would be an 17 extremely antidemocratic and unfair result. Nothing in 18 Missouri law requires that result.

19 And, in fact, I actually think the merits of this 20 case are quite straightforward under the constitutional 21 text. The constitutional texts prohibits that result.

22 And we're going to go through all of that briefly, you 23 know, just sketching out three arguments the State's 24 going to make just to give Your Honor a direction of 25 where we're going.

1 First, the State would like to repeat its prior 2 argument that Plaintiffs' lack standing. Plaintiffs 3 have the burden of proving standing at trial. You know, 4 the State's not going to repeat all of the prior 5 arguments that it made here. I would refer the Court to 6 the first slide in the demonstrative that we handed you.
7 You know, that's just a quote from the Missouri
8 Collusion for Environment case. The State respectfully 9 repeats its argument that Plaintiffs are simply 10 asserting an interest in the law being followed here.
11 That's a generalized grievance under Missouri Collusion 12 for State.

13 It's very similar to the Gill v. Whitford case 14 where the U.S. Supreme Court said that there was no 15 standing. Just because you're election -- just because 16 you're a registered voter does not mean you have 17 standing to challenge a map that you would be voting 18 under. That's the Gill versus Whitford case.

19 So unless the Court has questions, you know, 20 we're not going repeat all of our prior arguments. We 21 would just ask the Court when it issues a final ruling 22 to address standing and to make a ruling on standing.
23 Unless the Court does have questions on standing, I'll 24 move to the second point.

25 THE COURT: No questions.

1 MR. CAPOZZI: Thank you, Your Honor.
2 So I want to talk a little bit about estoppel.
3 My friends got to make a lot of their merit arguments 4 earlier. We've been saving them for now. I'll try to 5 be brief and concise. If People Not Politicians were a 6 plaintiff in this case, they would be estopped from 7 bringing this case. Now, I understand that my friends
8 are frustrated, and I know that People Not Politicians 9 is frustrated that the State has been trying to probe 10 whether there's a relationship between these two 11 entities. I understand.

12 But the State is also frustrated because the 13 State is litigating against this referendum campaign.
14 And from the State's perspective, the referendum
15 campaign is saying one thing in federal court to secure 16 a way, and then they come here through different 17 plaintiffs, they say the opposite thing. And they're 18 trying to win on both sides of a legal argument. That 19 is exactly the sort of maneuver that estoppel is 20 designed to prevent.

21 Now, my friends say that People Not Politicians 22 never said this. They say that we are misreading the 23 transcripts. The transcripts in the case, the Court can 24 look at the exchange. It's a long discussion in federal 25 court. Judge Bluestone asked -- the State asked me

1 directly when the signatures submitted, is the map
2 frozen? And you'll see I said there is some legal 3 uncertainty on this point. The State's position is that 4 the map is not frozen until the end of the certification
5 process. Now, I made that concession in federal court
6 even though it damaged the State's case for standing.
7 That was not good for us, having standing in federal 8 court. Judge Bluestone then asked People Not 9 Politicians, what's your position on the same question.
10 And you'll see five or six times People Not Politicians 11 lawyer tried to avoid making this concession. And 12 Judge Bluestone said explicitly that they would lose the 13 case if they did not concede that the map will remain in 14 effect until the certification process is over.

15 Now, my friends say that I'm not characterizing 16 that accurately. I would just point the Court to the 17 third slide in the deck that I gave you. My friends 18 partially quoted this exchange earlier, and I got 19 frustrated. I apologize for that. But this actually is 20 the full quote in context of what I said and what 21 Judge Bluestone said. And this is at the end of the 22 long exchange in federal court. And I'll just read it 23 with your court's indulgence.

24 You know, Mr. Capozzi, it's also still quite 25 unclear to me what the status of the map will be when

1 they submit their signatures. I think eventually my 2 friend conceded that the map stays in effect unless and 3 until they can win a state court challenge. That was a 4 hypothetical state court challenge to the -- to the 5 denial of certification by the Secretary. And the 6 Court, that's what the Court says. That where I think 7 everybody wound up.

8 And Mr. Hatfield is nodding his head yes. I do 9 think that's very important. And I think as we talked 10 about earlier that the arguments for dismissal will be 11 very flat, if that weren't the case. But I do think, I 12 mean, it is abundantly clear though from the record 13 that's been developed at this hearing, that that's their 14 position right or wrong.

15 So the reason that I was hedging in that quote, 16 Your Honor, is because I knew that that would damage our 17 standing. But I still said it because that's what both 18 sides agreed at the hearing and the Court agreed that 19 the other side, I mean, I'm talking right here about the 20 status of the map when they submit their signatures.

21 And I say that both sides agree, the map is not frozen.
22 Judge Bluestone agreed that that point was abundantly 23 clear. So with respect if People Not Politicians were 24 the plaintiff in this case, they would be estopped.
25 This whole claim would be estopped and they couldn't go

1 forward.

2 Now, People Not Politician is not the Plaintiff
3 in this case. It is Maggard and Lombardi. Two voters 4 who admitted during their depositions that they were 5 recruited by the Missouri ACLU to bring this case. The 6 State's first position, and we lay this out in our 7 brief, is as a matter of law. Without even having to 8 look at evidence, the Court can find that Plaintiffs and 9 People Not Politicians are too closely related to be 10 contradicting each other's legal positions in different 11 courts.

12 You know, my friend, this argument was like the 13 Attorney General trying to estop any citizen in the 14 state from contradicting him. A petition's signers and 15 a referendum petition's organizer are part of the same 16 political campaign. They have the exact same goals.
17 They have the exact same purpose. And I'll just point 18 out that Plaintiffs' litigation interests are fully 19 aligned with People Not Politicians. And, in fact, 20 there's deposition transcripts confirming that, which 21 I'll come to in a minute.

22 So it is unfair to the State and it is 23 inequitable to the State that as the State mitigates 24 against the referendum campaign in different courts, 25 that they're allowed to contradict each other. By

1 having signers of the petition come in, advance the 2 referendum organizers interests, while contradicting the 3 referendum organizers petition. So that's the State's 4 kind of first level argument there. Is that's 5 inequitable. That's the type of case that judicial 6 estoppel is meant to apply to.

7 Now, the State has tried to find evidence of 8 coordination. The State did so under extreme time
9 pressures. I think we did all of our deposition in a 10 week. We did so where Plaintiffs refused to turn over 11 relevant evidence as to People Not Politicians, and we 12 did so because, in a case where we can't depose 13 plaintiffs' lawyers, who are most likely to know whether 14 coordination happened, we're not going to depose
15 opposing counsel in a case.

16 But nevertheless, despite those limitations the 17 State did find evidence. And I believe this is on pages 18 24 to 26 of our pretrial brief where we summarize what 19 we found. We know that People Not Politicians leader, 20 Mr. Von Glahn and its lead lawyer Mr. Hatfield, promised 21 the State would be sued over its position that the mere 22 submission of the referendum petition did not freeze
23 HB 1. They were telling the press that this lawsuit 24 would be brought. And yet we know they have not brought 25 that lawsuit. We know that Mr. Von Glahn knew this

1 lawsuit would be filed five days in advance. That 2 suggests at least some prefiling coordination.
3 Someone in the Maggard Plaintiff's camp made a 4 communication that Mr. Von Glahn ended up knowing about 5 the lawsuit. We know that People Not Politicians
6 created strategy documents related to this lawsuit
7 before it was filed. Those documents were not turned 8 over to the State. We don't know what they say. We 9 know Von Glahn testified to their existence. The Court 10 has the option to review them in camera. But, you know, 11 the State's kind of arguing blindly on that. We haven't 12 seen them.

13 In their depositions Mr. Von Glahn and 14 Mr. Hatfield both admitted that they considered bringing 15 this lawsuit. But they testified that doing so was no 16 longer necessary because this suit was filed. And so 17 Mr. Von Glahn and Mr. Hatfield admitted, and I think 18 this point is kind of obvious, that this lawsuit 19 resolves all their legal needs with respect to the 20 question in this case. That shows pretty clear 21 alignment of the interest that Plaintiffs have and the 22 interest that People Not Politicians have.

23 And so, again, we would ask the Court to find 24 that Plaintiffs and People Not Politicians are too 25 closely related to be contradicting each other's legal

1 positions in different courts in this state. It's 2 unseemly to allow that. It's unfair to the State. It
3 damages judicial integrity. And the Court should not 4 allow it.

5 If the Court has no questions on estoppel, I will 6 move to the merits.

7 THE COURT: Go ahead.

8 MR. CAPOZZI: So on the merits, Your Honor, you 9 know, we already talked about, I tried to frame what 10 this case is about. And I pose in my hypothetical, 11 which I would encourage my friends to engage with.

12 What happens if in April, May, June, who knows 13 when the local election officials will finish the very 14 time consuming process of checking all these signatures.
15 What happens if we find out that there were not enough 16 signatures for the referendum to meet the State 17 constitutions requirements for qualifying? What 18 happens?

19 You know, as Your Honor has suggested in his 20 questions, you know, the legal status of the map would 21 be flipping back and forth in that hypothetical. Just 22 as it would flip back and forth if the Secretary
23 certifies the referendum this summer. And so there's a 24 risk in either scenario that the law is going to be 25 changing. There is uncertainty and it is unavoidable.

1 And so the question that the State has to deal 2 with is well, in this sort of uncertainty, who do we 3 favor? Do we favor a duly enacted law passed by a 4 majority of the people's elected representatives and 5 signed by the Governor or do we assume that a referendum
6 petition submitted by a small minority of Missouri
7 citizens meets constitutional requirements. You know, 8 which way does the assumption go? Do we assume that the 9 petition is valid or do we assume that it is not valid 10 until the Secretary confirms that it is. My overall 11 submission is the only responsible thing to do is to 12 side with the presumptive validity of duly enacted laws.
13 All throughout Missouri law, the tie goes to the 14 Legislature. Statutes are presumed constitutional and 15 there's no basis in Missouri law for assuming that a 16 referendum petition has adequate signatures.

17 But the Court doesn't need to rely on sort of, 18 you know, over -- grand overarching constitutional 19 principles. I think the Court can resolve this case on 20 the text. You know, if a 34-year-old tries to run for 21 president, it's an easy constitutional case. You can't.
22 The text says you have to be 35.

23 I think it's the third in the side of the State 24 constitutional language. The two constitutional 25 provisions at issue, I want to take a close look at this

1 language. So Article 3, Section 52-B says any measure
2 referred to the people shall take effect when approved
3 by a majority of the votes cast thereon and not 4 otherwise. The key language in this case is "referred 5 to the people." What does it mean for a measure to be 6 referred to the people? Who does the referring? How 7 does the referring happen? When does the referral
8 happen? The State's position is that, a matter can only 9 be referred to the people by the Secretary. And 10 Plaintiffs, to their credit, agree with that.
11 My friend -- and he can correct me if I'm 12 wrong -- expressly conceded that it is the Secretary who 13 has to do the referring under this provision. Frankly, 14 the State is surprised to get that concession, but we 15 agree that that is what the law requires. After all,
16 Article 3, Section 52-A says that referendum petitions
17 must be filed with the Secretary.

18 And from the very beginning of the history of the 19 referendum in this state, and you see this in Kemper or 20 Carter if you prefer. You see it in Dallmyer. You see 21 it in Toberman. You see it in the Chugh case. And in 22 all of these cases, it was the Secretary making the 23 referral.

24 And so I'm happy that Plaintiffs have abandon the 25 more ambiguous version of their argument, which is that

1 merely dropping off the signatures at the office is what 2 does the referral. I think everybody agrees that the 3 Secretary has to do something. The Secretary has to 4 make the referral for a matter to be referred to the 5 people.

6 So what does the Secretary have to do? The 7 State's position is that the Secretary has to issue a 8 certificate of sufficiency following a review of the 9 signatures and confirming that the referendum is legal.
10 Now, how do we know that? We know that because 11 Section 116 of the Missouri's revised statutes lays out 12 a detailed process for what the Secretary has to do.

13 And I think this was the fourth slide in what we 14 handed up and we lay out the relevant statutory 15 provisions. It's an instruction manual to the 16 secretary as to what he has to do. And it ends -- the 17 instruction -- the list of instructions ends with 18 Section 116.150.1, which says, after the Secretary of 19 State makes a determination on the sufficiency of the 20 petition. And if the Secretary of State finds it's 21 sufficient the Secretary of State shall issue a 22 certificate.

23 The State re-- respectfully submits that is the 24 triggering event for when a matter is referred to the 25 people. We think that is the legislature's clear

1 intent. Otherwise why would the Secretary be required
2 to issue a certificate of sufficiency. It wouldn't even 3 make sense. If, as my friend says, the matter is 4 immediately referred to the people, why does the 5 Secretary have to issue a certificate of sufficiency? I
6 mean, the referral's already happened. The certificate 7 of sufficiency would serve no purpose. And so that 8 doesn't make sense. Now -- and so once again, we would 9 urge the Court to look at Section 116. That answers the 10 question of when a matter is deemed referred to the 11 people.

12 Now, Plaintiffs say that a matter is referred to 13 the people the day that the signatures are dropped off.
14 They seem to imagine that the Secretary has to do some 15 kind of snap judgment on the day that they're dropped 16 off or maybe he doesn't have to do some kind of snap 17 judgment. Maybe we just indulge the legal fiction that 18 the secretary does the referral but, bottom line, 19 Plaintiffs' view is, the day those signatures are 20 dropped off, before we know if they're valid that's when 21 a measure are referred to the people.

22 Okay. If that's true, the logical implication, 23 if you look -- go back to the State constitutional text, 24 any measure referred to the people shall take effect
25 when approved by the majority of the votes cast thereon

1 and not otherwise. So when the measure is referred to 2 the people, under Plaintiffs' view, there has to be a 3 vote. Can't take effect unless there's a vote. But 4 that's not Plaintiffs' position. They don't want to 5 live with the logical implication of the technical 6 argument.

7 They say, well, if it turns out that there's an 8 insufficient number of signatures later the Secretary 9 can unrefer it or decertify. They use different words.
10 And, you know, the Secretary can sort of pro nunc tunc
11 this petition and, you know, even though the petition 12 was referred before, we're now going to say it was never 13 referred in the first place.

14 THE COURT: So under your argument, if it's 15 certified, it doesn't take into effect until there's a 16 vote on it?

17 MR. CAPOZZI: Correct.

18 THE COURT: So the HB 1 map would be in effect 19 for the election at the same time there is a vote on 20 whether or not HB 1 stays in effect?

21 MR. CAPOZZI: No, Your Honor.

22 So if the Secretary certifies the referendum, if 23 the Secretary issues a certificate of sufficiency, HB 1 24 cannot go into effect. So again, from the begins the 25 State has said that this case not ripe, that Plaintiffs'

1 alleged injuries are premature. The Secretary is going 2 through the certification process right now. The local 3 election officials are looking at the signatures. If 4 the signatures come back and the Secretary finds there's 5 enough signatures, the Secretary finds it's legal and 6 certifies the referendum, HB1 can't take effect.

7 Now, my friend say that there's practical
8 difficulties with this, you know, because the statute 9 gives everybody until pretty late in the year, until 10 late July to do all of this work. And I agree, that is 11 a practical problem. You know, the statutory scheme, 12 Section 116 for dealing with referendum petitions was 13 enacted in 1980. We've never had a referendum on a 14 congressional map in that time. This really hasn't 15 happened in modern Missouri history. This is new to 16 everybody in the State. And so we're trying to figure 17 out what do we do where, yes, like, the question of 18 whether map is in effect has important practical 19 consequences in -- throughout 2026. We understand that.
20 But the State's position is, again, we can't just assume 21 that they have the signatures. You have to check. And 22 I'll come back to this more in a bit. But historically 23 there have been high invalidity rates.

24 You know, Plaintiffs say People Not Politicians
25 submitted 300,000 signatures. Well, it's a lot more

1 complicated than that. First of all, 100,000 of those 2 signatures are at issue in a case before Judge Limbaugh, 3 because those signatures were gathered before the 4 Governor signed the bill. And there's a question
5 whether those can be considered at all. And right now
6 they're not being considered. So it's 200,000
7 signatures. And then the question is, well, where are 8 those signatures. You have to have a certain number in 9 six congressional districts. The total number you have, 10 doesn't matter. If you have a hundred and fifty 11 thousand signatures in Jackson County, that's not going 12 to be good enough 'cause you're not going to have enough 13 in the other parts of the State. The State doesn't know 14 where those signatures are. But then even assuming on 15 their face that there are enough potential signatures in 16 the six congressional districts, we have to see if 17 there's enough valid signatures. That's why the local 18 election officials are checking. You check to see if 19 these are registered voters. You check to make sure 20 they didn't sign twice. You check to make sure that the 21 signatures match. There's a very labor intensive 22 signature matching process. And once again, the 23 evidence submitted by the State shows that error -- or 24 not error rates, invalidity rates of the signatures
25 submitted in these referendum are routinely between 30

1 and 40 percent. If we have anything close to that in 2 this case, referendum probably won't have enough
3 signatures. And so I understand that Plaintiffs want a 4 quick answer. They want to know what map is going to be 5 governed. I understand that. The State wants that too 6 to be clear, but we need to do the work to figure out if 7 this referendum petition qualifies. And fundamentally, 8 what Plaintiffs are trying to do is just skip over that 9 process and render it meaningless.

10 Going back to Plaintiffs' textual position, it's 11 strange, you know, because, again, they acknowledge -- I
12 mean, they hear the hypotheticals. What happens if, you 13 know, a foreign government submits a referendum petition 14 with, you know, 200,000 signatures, but it's all the 15 same signature? You know, under their view, that 16 freezes the law that it challenges.

17 Now, what they say, well, the Secretary should 18 get around quickly to decertifying that. The Secretary 19 should figure out that that's not legitimate but, you 20 know, say the Secretary is busy. He doesn't start 21 looking at it for two weeks. I think we'd all agree in 22 that hypothetical for those two weeks, under Plaintiffs'
23 view, the law is frozen.

24 Now, let's say after the two weeks, the Secretary 25 gets around. He says, wait a minute, these are all the 1 same signatures. They don't have enough signatures.

2 This doesn't qualify. Plaintiffs say that the Secretary
3 would decertify the referendum at that point. But if -- 4 I don't see how that can be constitutional. Because 5 under Plaintiffs's view, the measure was referred to the 6 people the day it was submitted. I think they have to 7 agree with that.
8 But Article 3, Section 52-B says any measure
9 referred to the people shall take effect when approved
10 by a majority of the votes cast thereon and not 11 otherwise. So once the matter is referred, you have to 12 have the vote. But under Plaintiffs' view in my 13 hypothetical even though the matter was referred, you 14 don't have the vote. And so instead the -- they're 15 inviting the court to develop this legal fiction where, 16 we will just pretend retroactively that the law was not 17 referred to the people even though it was and even 18 though it had an immediate legal effect. It's a weird 19 sort of disappearing act. You know, in these 20 hypotheticals, you know, today the measure was referred 21 and it froze, a dually enacted law, but tomorrow we have 22 to pretend it was never referred. I don't even know 23 what the status of the law is in that interim. I mean, 24 it's a criminal law. Could people be charged under it?
25 Was law in effect those two weeks. You know, the weird

1 legal consequences of Plaintiffs' position is really 2 endless here.
3 So let's turn to precedent now. Plaintiff say
4 that the Missouri Supreme Court settled this long ago
5 but that's not true. There's actually only one decision 6 which is directly addressed the question before this 7 court. Which is under the modern statutory system, 8 Section 116 for processing referenda, when is a matter
9 deemed referred to the people under the State 10 Constitution. Only one case has actually addressed that 11 question. And that is from a couple months ago in the 12 U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of 13 Missouri, Missouri General Assembly v. Von Glahn.
14 Now, my friends say that the Court did not 15 address that issue in this case. The Court did. We 16 talked about it at great length in the hearing, but you 17 don't have to take my word for it. I think it's the 18 third slide in what we handed, Your Honor. It's from 19 page one of this federal court decision. And it 20 addresses the exact issue in this case. And I'm just 21 going to read it with your indulgence.
22 Quote, after the timely submission of a final 23 petition, the Secretary of State must examine the 24 petition to determine whether it complies with the 25 Constitution of Missouri and with Chapter 116 and verify

1 whether there are enough valid signatures to trigger a
2 statewide vote. If the Secretary finds the petition 3 satisfies both requirements, the challenge law is 4 displaced and will only take effect when approved by a 5 majority of the votes cast thereon.

6 Judge Bluestone opinion is unambiguous here. The 7 law can't be frozen unless if the Secretary finds that 8 the petition satisfies both requirements. That's the 9 requirements that there are enough signatures and that 10 it's legal. So at minimum, my friends are asking the 11 Court to create a split between judges within this state 12 on this same question. The State would encourage the 13 court not to do that.

14 The State also cites out-of-state precedence.
15 Which, you know, my friend kind of waived off and say, 16 oh, the Court shouldn't look at other states. But the 17 Maryland Constitution is actually very similar to 18 Missouri's. The Maryland's Constitution allows the 19 people to do referenda and it provides that laws are 20 frozen pending the vote.

21 And in Barns, the Maryland's High Court, back 22 then it was called the Maryland's Court of Appeals, that 23 was their Supreme Court back then, said, no, the law is 24 not frozen until the Secretary finishes the statutory 25 certification process. And so the exact question we

1 have here, virtually identical state constitutions, 2 Maryland says, no. Law is not frozen until the 3 secretary finishes the statutory certification process.
4 We also cite the Wyoming Supreme Court's decision. We 5 cite decisions from several other states. I think it's 6 pretty telling that my friends don't even try to cite 7 out-of-state authority. And so, you know, I would 8 encourage the Court not to make Missouri an outlier on 9 this question.

10 Now, I think my friend's primary arguments focus 11 on this Kemper v. Carter case, Dullmeyer and Toberman.
12 This trio of old Missouri Supreme Court opinions. But 13 there's a fundamental problem with relying on these 14 opinion. These cases predated the 1980 adoption of 15 Section 116. Section 116 is the statutory system which 16 governs the Secretary's review today. It requires the 17 Secretary to confirm the signatures.

18 Before 1980, the Secretary was not required to 19 confirm the signatures. In the statutory system that 20 existed in the early 1900s, which is what the Missouri
21 Supreme Court addressed in Carter, the Kemper v. Carter 22 case, the statute was fundamentally different. And this 23 is the days that there was a lot of trusts for direct 24 democracy. Yeah, this was the progressive era of U.S.
25 politics.

1 Back then, a referendum circulator, organizer
2 could self-certify the sufficiency of the signatures.
3 Missouri law allowed a referendum organizer to 4 self-certify that the signatures were sufficient, and 5 so, as a matter of statutory interpretation, in 6 Kemper v. Carter the Missouri Supreme Court said
7 correctly, that the -- that the Secretary of State's 8 duties purely administrative. It's because they were 9 back then.

10 And even still, as Your Honor pointed out, in 11 Kemper V Carter, in Toberman the Missouri Supreme Court
12 was still explicit that the Secretary still has to refer 13 the matter to the people and there's still stuff the 14 Secretary has to do before he can do that. Even back 15 then the Secretary had to make a finding of legal 16 sufficiency and timeliness. But that's the big 17 difference between the world back then which was 18 discussed in those cases and the world today.

19 It's -- in 1980 the General Assembly on the 20 recommendation of former Secretary of State Kirkpatrick 21 adopted this intense process for reviewing the 22 signatures. And we're not just going to take the 23 circulator's word for it anymore. We're going to make 24 sure that they actually checked the signatures and that 25 we're sure that there's enough signatures. And because

1 Section 116 didn't even exist those old cases are really 2 not on point.
3 Now, I'm not the only one to reach that 4 conclusion interestingly enough. In the late 1980s the 5 Wyoming Supreme Court was addressing this question under 6 the Wyoming Constitution. And the proponents of an 7 immediate freeze cited Missouri and cited Kemper v.
8 Carter, and said, well, there, you know, that's, 9 immediate free. Secretary's duties are purely 10 ministerial. The Wyoming Supreme Court said Kemper is 11 no longer good law in Missouri, because the statute 12 changed so much. Section 116 was adopted in 1980. That 13 abrogated Carter. And so different statute, different 14 rules.

15 I think, and I'm curious what my friends will say 16 on rebuttal to this. Because they say in their brief in 17 a footnote, well, to the extent that Section 116 is a 18 problem for us, it's constitutional as applied to this 19 case. I'm curious if they're going to actually make an 20 argument there, because to me that seems to be 21 implication of what they're saying. Section 116 is 22 unconstitutional in requiring this big review process 23 before the certification decision, before the matter is 24 referred to the people, under Article 3 of the Missouri
25 Constitution they say that that's unconstitutional.

1 They make the argument in footnote. I think it's 2 one or two sentences. They don't even engage with the 3 relevant standard of review. I think most courts would 4 deem their constitutional to Section 116 waived.

5 I'm curious if they have more to say about that 6 argument when they get back up.

7 So under Section 116 the governing law, my 8 friends have only two pieces of evidence. They have the 9 nonbinding trial court opinion in Chugh from early 10 1980s, which actually supports the State. And we 11 address this in our brief.

12 In Chugh, there was a plaintiff who challenged -- 13 so there the Secretary certified. The Secretary 14 referred the matter to the people and the plaintiff in 15 Chugh said, you shouldn't have done that. But that 16 makes this case fundamentally different than Chugh.

17 Here the Secretary has not referred the matter to the 18 people. All agree on that. I think. The Secretary has 19 not made a finding as to legal validity, unlike the 20 Secretary in Chugh.

21 Now, to extent that Chugh is suggesting that the 22 Secretary has the discretion to refer the matter to the 23 people before the statutory process concludes, we think 24 that's wrong. And we would ask the Court to not to 25 follow that. But at most Chugh suggests that the 1 Secretary has discretion whether to follow the full 2 process before referring to the people. The Secretary

3 there apparently thought that he could do that. Here 4 the Secretary has not done that and does not think he 5 can do that. And so Chugh does not support Plaintiffs.
6 It actually supports the State.

7 Second, Plaintiffs quote articles about former 8 Secretary Jay Ashcroft. And they say that, you know, 9 the right to work referendum he immediately froze the 10 challenged law. We don't have any evidence on this 11 point. We have some articles making claims about what 12 Secretary Ashcroft did. Secretary Ashcroft is a 13 witness. We don't know what Secretary Ashcroft's
14 thought process was. But even assuming that he thought 15 that, okay, the Secretary has discretion to immediately 16 freeze a law, when a referendum petition comes in. Even 17 assuming that that stands for everything Plaintiffs say, 18 he's not the State's chief legal officer and he's not 19 the Secretary of State today. There's no judicial 20 opinions that arose from that case. And today the 21 Attorney General and the Secretary of State are in 22 agreement. The Missouri's Constitution and Section 116 do 23 not allow what Plaintiffs are asking for.

24 So we've talked about text. We've talked about 25 precedence. I only have one more thing to talk about, I

1 promise.

2 THE COURT: You promise?

3 MR. CAPOZZI: I promise.

4 I'd like to close with a good ode to common sense
5 and to basic democratic principles. Because I do think 6 that that's what is at stake in this case. And I think 7 those principles cut the opposite way of what my friends
8 suggest. It simply makes no sense for an unverified 9 pile of signatures to freeze a law enacted by a majority 10 of the people's elected representatives. The logical 11 implication of Plaintiffs' position is that even a 12 completely fraudulent petition would initially suspend 13 state law through its mere filing.

14 I mean, we can come up with all kinds of bizarre 15 hypotheticals about foreign governments submitting 16 300,000 of the same signature. You know, I could do 17 that all day. But under Plaintiffs' view, those 18 bizarre, obviously inadequate petitions do freeze duly 19 enacted state laws, at least until the Secretary gets 20 around to finishing the review process and issuing a 21 certificate of insufficiency.

22 And even beyond extreme hypotheticals, again, I 23 return to the hypothetical I opened with, is it fair to 24 the people of Missouri and their elected representatives 25 to freeze a law enacted by a majority of the people's

1 elected representatives, a law which may well have 2 majority support? You know, it's one thing, and we all 3 agree the Missouri Constitution says this. It's -- the 4 Missouri Constitution gives minorities, political 5 minorities an extremely potent power in this state, a 6 small minority of the Missourians can freeze a dually
7 enacted state law by submitting a ligament petition.
8 But the Missouri Constitution does not give unlimited 9 right to political minorities to do that. That would 10 not be democracy. No. There are strict rules. You 11 have to have a lot of signatures. It's not easy to get 12 them. Section 116 sets out this review process.
13 Section 116 is the check on that tool of minority power.
14 And it's one thing to say, you know, a minority can 15 freeze a law.
16 But what Plaintiffs are saying is we should just 17 assume that when a minority drops the file of 18 signatures, they follow all the rules that they have 19 enough signatures and we should allow that minority to 20 freeze a law without double checking, without being sure 21 that they met the statutory requirements, that I would 22 submit is fundamentally antidemocratic. That is not 23 consistent with how democracy works. And frankly, I 24 think their position is unfair to the majority.
25 And the Arizona Supreme Court pointed out this

1 dynamic in another out of state case we cite, the 2 Feldmeier v. Watson case.

3 THE COURT: Spell Feldmeier for me real quick.

4 MR. CAPOZZI: Feldmeier v. Watson.

5 THE COURT: Will you spell Feldmeier?

6 MR. CAPOZZI: Yes, Your Honor.

7 F-e-l-d-m-e-i-e-r.

8 THE COURT: Thank you.

9 MR. CAPOZZI: And we do -- we do discuss all of 10 this in the pretrial brief. I understand.

11 So the Arizona Supreme Court said is, quote, it

12 makes since to hold referendum proponents to, quote, an

13 exacting standard because referenda permit a minority to 14 hold up the effective day of legislation which may well

15 represent the wishes of the majority, end quote. And 16 for that same reason, Missouri law puts exacting

17 requirements on minority groups that want to try to 18 freeze duly enacted State laws.

19 And to balance against that, to protect the 20 majority, Section 116 requires the Secretary to make

21 sure that those requirements are met. The Court should 22 enforce those pro-democracy limits on the referendum and 23 enter judgment in favor of Defendants. I welcome the 24 Court's questions.

25 THE COURT: None at this time.

1 MR. CAPOZZI: Thank you, Your Honor.

2 THE COURT: Off, Jenny. Not an Official Court Document

3 (A RECESS WAS TAKEN.)

4 THE COURT: Parties ready?

5 MR. ELLINGER: Yes, Your Honor.

6 THE COURT: Back on the record. 25AC-CC09120.

7 Jake Maggard versus State of Missouri.

8 Mr. Ellinger, the floor is yours.

9 MR. ELLINGER: Thank you, Judge.

10 And thank you for taking a break. I think that 11 actually makes things a little shorter and get out here

12 little earlier for lunch. We spent 90 minutes already 13 at least, maybe more than that maybe two hours on oral

14 argument. The one thing I take away from that is I

15 think the Plaintiffs are putting the cart before the 16 horse here. And I think the reason is because they're

17 not focused, or at least I was always taught where you

18 start by focussing. What does the constitutional itself

19 says and then we can worry about the other things.

20 And -- sorry. I'm old school here. I actually

21 have a paper book here. But we're talking about

22 Section 52-A, Section 52-B of Article 3. And I think we 23 started with 52-A. Framers saw to start with 52-A,

24 sever to start with 52-B. And 52-A says, and I think

25 this is really important language that the referendum

1 petitions are filed with the Secretary of State. So
2 we've already agree with that. In fact, the other side 3 has conceded that the Secretary refers a matter to the 4 voters.

5 If you go up above that it says, petition signed 6 by five percent of the legal voters in each of two 7 thirds of the congressional districts of the State. So 8 let's look at what that threshold means. That means for 9 a referendum you have to five percent of the legal 10 voters in two thirds of the congressional districts.
11 That's six I don't think anybody disputes that.

12 The Plaintiffs have talked a lot about why, what, 13 I think that how they started theirs off with. I'd like 14 to focus on what is a legal voter is. Let's say what 15 is. What is a legal voter. We actually know what that 16 is. We know what a legal voter is. It's a person who 17 lives in the State of Missouri who has registered the 18 vote who has not been disenfranchised. That means -- 19 that has to mean something. When the framers of the 20 Constitution limited the power. It's not an unlimited 21 power. It's a limited power. The framers decided that 22 there would be a power of referendum but they didn't 23 want the tyranny of the majority. They wanted to be 24 very specific and make sure that there was a set of 25 qualifications on that and restrictions on that. And

1 that's what the Constitution put in. It put in a 2 restriction. Five percent of legal voters.
3 Now, I'm not going to rehash the history of all 4 of the cases. And I think Mr. Capozzi did an excellent 5 job of addressing how the law has changed.
6 It has to mean where you have to be timely, you
7 have to be legal and you have to be sufficient. We know
8 what a legal voter is. We actually know what sufficient 9 is. The statutes say what sufficiency is. The 10 Constitution says what sufficiency is. We don't know 11 where the signatures come from. By congressional 12 district, we know what county's pages were submitted on.
13 And I think we could probably figure out what signatures 14 came out of those counties. But you don't know in many 15 of these counties, particularly the urban one, what the 16 split is. You don't know who's a registered voter. You 17 don't know who's not a registered voter. There's a lot 18 of work that has to be done before we subsume this 19 massive power. And that massive power is restricted 20 because the framers didn't want people to jump off the 21 edge and suddenly start suspending laws that were put 22 into effect.
23 And I cringe at the word suspended. I cringe at 24 using that word. Because if you read the Constitution 25 it never says that. You can read the entire set of 1 provisions on referendum, it's not that many words. And 2 the word suspend never used a single time. It's a

3 created term. I think it's one that lots of people like 4 to talk about. But it's a created term. The framers
5 didn't say suspend. The framers didn't say frozen.
6 They didn't say any of that. They said that if a 7 referendum had enough legal voters, then it went to the 8 people. That's what the Constitution said. And I think 9 that's important because other constitutions, they're 10 created around the same time, actually used the word 11 suspend. And they were very clear. They knew what that 12 meant. They knew how to say something got suspended or 13 didn't get suspended.

14 And I think other courts have looked at that.
15 And I think you can look at some of those courts that 16 have looked at the language of constitutions. And said 17 the framers of the Constitution know what they put in, 18 that's the plain language.

19 We also have to be cognitive of what they didn't 20 put in. We can't read new things into it. And I think 21 that's what Plaintiffs are trying to do here, trying to 22 read new things into the Constitution. If there are 23 five percent of the legal voters in six of eight 24 congressional districts, two thirds, if that occurs, 25 then the matter get referred. Then 52-B kicks in.

1 That's when 52-B kicks in. That's when it becomes 2 effective upon the vote of the people. Not until that 3 point.

4 I think the Supreme Court, in a different case,
5 one that I think actually hasn't been talked about much 6 here, which is -- and I will get this name wrong,
7 because it's Kaesser, K-a-e-s-s-e-r, versus Becker,
8 243 SW 346 MoBac 1922. It's interesting that I 9 butchered the name, because A-E in the old English put 10 them together. So I'm not sure how you actually 11 pronounce that.

12 THE COURT: You say 243 SW?

13 MR. ELLINGER: SW 346.

14 THE COURT: Thank you.

15 MR. ELLINGER: And the Court in that case talked 16 about the importance of this process and how really, you 17 know, referendum is something that was put into the 18 process but it comes with those restrictions.

19 So if you'll indulge me, the Court says when a 20 solum legislative act is sought to be set aside, it's 21 our duty to see that the constitutional and statutory, 22 notice that constitutional and statutory, requirements
23 have been substantially met by those seeking to refer 24 the act. The referendum is a safeguard against 25 legislation which is deemed unwise, and the law must not

1 be so construed as to destroy its effectiveness. And 2 here's the key point. On the other hand full observance 3 of substantial requirements must be exacted, less the 4 referendum be made an instrument of injustice or 5 oppression by a militant and well organized opposition.
6 Much less in numbers than the required five percent of 7 the legal voters in two thirds of the congressional 8 districts.

9 The Court knew you had to go through this 10 process. The Court was not willing to take this idea 11 that Plaintiffs have floated. We dump a bunch of boxes 12 with a bunch of papers in it and the law is suspended.
13 That's not what the Constitution says. And if they can 14 point to the word suspended in the Constitution, I will 15 more than happily stand corrected. If they can put 16 something in the co-- if they can point to something in 17 the Constitution that says when a box of papers is 18 delivered to the Secretary of State, the law is 19 suspended. I'm more than happy to be corrected. They 20 can't because it doesn't say that. The Constitution is 21 very clear.

22 And as I know that the Supreme Court in that -- 23 in that quote I just read also mentions statutory 24 requirements. We have a statutory frame work. I don't 25 know why we're here debating this today. Let the

1 statutes play out. That was what the Constitution, 2 that's what the framers intended, that's what the 3 Supreme Court said. Let the statutory framework work 4 play out. A number of precedential cases that have been 5 talked about here, I'm not sure many of them are 6 actually precedent at this point, but we can 7 consistently talk about legal sufficient and timely
8 petitions. In fact, I think Plaintiffs talk a bunch 9 about Moore versus Toberman, which is a case that 10 doesn't even talk about sufficiency. Sufficiency was 11 conceded. Kinda of hard to use that as an application 12 now to say, we have to assume it's sufficient. And 13 that's the logical leap here. We just have to assume 14 it's sufficient. The statutes provide a process so that 15 we know. We should take dictation of what the Court said 16 that this is a serious action when you suspend a duly 17 enacted law.

18 And I think if you look at the sufficiency 19 question, that still has yet to be established. That 20 goes back to obviously we argued standing and ripeness a 21 long time in front of you Judge, it gunshot to ripeness
22 thing. Because if it's not sufficient and they think it 23 is, they have a statutory right -- a clearly defined 24 statutory right to immediately go to court on an 25 expedited basis to get an answer. And, you know,

1 conversely, if some -- if someone is harmed by a 2 determination that it is sufficient, those people have 3 the opportunity to go to court. Now, I'm not sure on an 4 average citizens gets that right. Hopefully we won't be 5 finding that out because it's not sufficient. But I
6 question how an average person, perhaps a petition
7 signer has the right to jump in before a determination 8 is sufficiency has been made to try to invalidate a 9 state law. I noticed Plaintiffs mentioned a few times 10 that we just terrible if people had to vote on the 11 unconstitutional map. I think that was term, they used, 12 might have been unconstitutional statute.

13 There's no allegation that House Bill 1 is 14 unconstitutional in this case. That's the not before 15 the court. Plaintiffs have not argued that. They 16 haven't asked for any relief, asking for anything to be 17 declared unconstitutional. What they're asking for is a 18 determination that a box of papers by default means 19 enough signatures to suspend something. We have to let 20 the process play through. And I think evidence of that 21 also goes to the fact that something is referred by the 22 Secretary of State. And the Secretary can't refer 23 something until that process goes through. We have to 24 read all this in conjunction. And when you read that in 25 conjunction you realize that when the process is done,

1 then the measure is referred. I don't like the word
2 suspended. I don't want to use that word because I 3 don't think it falls in the Constitution, but that's the 4 point at which 52-B kicks in, and that that referred 5 measure, IE that measure referred to the people which 6 can only occur after the Secretary of State conducts 7 that sufficiency process, shall not have -- take effect 8 until approved by a majority of the voters cast thereon.

9 We're way premature here or the wrong venue. The 10 venue is in 116 local election authorities right now 11 that are diligently going through signature pages. I 12 don't think anybody thinks that the local election 13 authorities are dragging their feet are delayed or we'd 14 have a lawsuit against a 116 election authorities to 15 move more quickly. Let the process play out.

16 Plaintiffs may have gotten their signatures.
17 They may be there. Then applicants will get suspended.
18 They may not be there. And the law will stay as it is.
19 Don't jump to the conclusion that the box of papers is 20 all it takes to stop a law in the State of Missouri.

21 I also find it's interesting that Plaintiffs have 22 said that their referendum right trumps the rights of 23 voters. They said, you know, state officials may have 24 issues, candidates may have officials, voters may have 25 problems. We don't care about that. This referendum

1 right trumps it. Well, the voters get a say if the 2 Plaintiffs do their job and they get enough signatures.
3 Until then, the voters' rights are voting under a duly 4 enacted law by the General Assembly.

5 There are statutory deadlines to ensure there's 6 not delay. We don't need to jump ahead at this point.
7 Finally, to I -- I think everybody would agree we have 8 moved this case in a pretty expeditious pace. Some 9 people may have doubted that was going to occur, I seem 10 to recall at one point. But we moved this at an 11 expeditious pace and I would like to compliment all the 12 counsel in that. But the fact that we have moved this 13 quickly doesn't change the underlying matter here, which 14 is the Constitution has to govern here. Section 52-A 15 controls. And that's kind of the end of the game.

16 And that the reason that Plaintiffs' relief
17 should be denied, they haven't shown irreparable harm.
18 They simply have made allegations. They seek an 19 injunction. They nowhere come near the standard for an 20 injunction. Spent all the time talking about the 21 merits. I presume they have effectively waived the 22 injunction argument, because they haven't addressed the 23 issues that are required to be established to get an 24 injunction. There's irreparable harm to the people
25 that have signed the petition. There's no irreparable

1 harm to the average Missourian if a validly elected map
2 goes forward.

3 If the map -- or excuse me -- if the petition is 4 found to be sufficient, yeah, maybe you can argue some 5 irreparable at that point if the Secretary didn't do
6 something. That's not what where at. We put the cart
7 before the horse. Let's get things lined back up again 8 and let this process get down the road and then if we 9 have to fight about it, we can come back and do it then.

10 Thank you, Judge.

11 THE COURT: Mr. Hawley?

12 MR. HAWLEY: Thank you, Your Honor.

13 I just have maybe five minutes. Just a few brief
14 things before we rest.

15 Everything the State and Intervenor has said,
16 there was no answer to the fundamental problem that I 17 posed at the beginning of this trial, which is, their 18 motion would allow legislation to take effect before the 19 referendum process is completed, even though the 20 Missouri Supreme Court has clearly said that the 21 referendum power exists to address legislation that has 22 not gone into effect. That was preset that we were 23 starting with and they still have not given any sort of 24 answer as to how they can reconcile all of these 25 different pieces without addressing that critical one.

1 And that's why ultimately we have included with 2 our case this argument about Chapter 116, specifically 3 specific sections as to their fundamental 4 unconstitutionality. We have not waived that argument.
5 I will address it right now very briefly. If the 6 Secretary is correct and the State is allowed to permit 7 the effectiveness of legislation before the people have 8 the chance to vote on it and referendum, if that's what 9 the statute allows, then those statutes will be 10 unconstitutional because it is a fundamental 11 precondition of the referendum right that legislation 12 has not yet gone into effect in order for the people to 13 vote on it. So if Chapter 116 allows that to happen, 14 yes, that is fundamentally unconstitutional.
15 We don't need to reach that point, though, 16 because statutes are to be construed in such a way as to 17 avoid a constitutional problem, and that is exactly what 18 we have done. We have proposed a position to ensure 19 that the statute has meaning, the Constitution has 20 meaning and the case law has meaning and the result of 21 that, the necessary result is the auto -- is the 22 presumption of inadequacy when the submit -- petitions are 23 submitted, the automatic suspension before the effective 24 date of legislation, followed by the review process to 25 confirm that stat -- that petitions are properly

1 referred to the people.

2 And that question about being referred to the 3 people, the State and I think the Intervenor, as well, 4 suggested that we made some big concession here today.

5 We did not. The case law says what it says, and it uses 6 the verb "refers" with the subject, the Secretary. But 7 that doesn't tell us anything. The devil is in the 8 details. What does it mean for something to be 9 referred? And we have explained that the way of making 10 sense of all of this is that the referral process has 11 several steps.

12 It begins with the automatic suspension upon 13 submission. It follows with the Secretary's process and 14 it ends with the Secretary's certifying or not 15 certifying, which will determine whether or not it 16 proceeds to a vote. And for that reason, the State 17 suggested that we've, essentially, read Chapter 116 out 18 of the referendum process. We have not. The 19 Secretary's job is still critical. It's to make sure 20 that that automatic suspension is proper and that a 21 matter has been properly referred to the people. That 22 is the Secretary's power.

23 But we need to have that automatic suspension or 24 else the system falls apart, because it loses a 25 fundamental precept of the referendum right. And the 1 Kaesser decision, which intervening counsel quoted, says

2 this specifically. We cannot allow any sort of law that 3 would destroy the effectiveness of the referendum
4 process under the Constitution -- the constitutional 5 rank. The State's position destroyed it effectively by 6 allowing the legislation to go into effect.

7 The substantial compliance with statutes, that is 8 important. And we re -- we recognize that. And that's 9 part of our position. What the Secretary does to 10 certify, to confirm that the suspension is proper that 11 is vital. Because we want to make sure that only 12 properly referred measures go -- could proceed to a vote 13 and that laws are not suspended without reason. But 14 that suspension still must occur as a preliminary 15 matter.

16 A few other minor points, Your Honor. First, the 17 Carter case that's been suggested that it's no longer 18 good law, because Chapter 116 was enacted in the 19 interim. And notwithstanding what the Wyoming Supreme 20 Court has said on the matter, we believe that Carter is 21 still good law. The particulars of what the secretary 22 has to do, that has changed over the past century.
23 Undoubtedly. But the reasoning and principles on which 24 the Carter court based its decision, those have not 25 changed. And I'll return to that when I close in just a

1 moment.

2 But again, the specifics might have changed but 3 the principles, those are still good. And it's as 4 reflected by the fact that prior Secretaries of State,
5 including Secretary Kirkpatrick as the State mentioned 6 the architect of the Chapter 116 took the position in 7 1980's that legislation was automatically suspended 8 before his certification process was completed after 9 Chapter 116 was codified as law.

10 The State has suggested that there is no evidence
11 of that. There is. It's Plaintiff's Exhibit 12 and 13
12 we moved into admission and the State did not object.

13 That is evidence that that's what's happened previously.

14 And our position here is consistent with what those 15 prior Secretaries of State did.

16 THE COURT: Did they have to?

17 MR. HAWLEY: We would argue yes, that that's the 18 only way of reconciling the Constitution, the case law
19 and the statutes. So -- so, yes. And then the, Chugh 20 Transport case reflects a judicial stamp on the 21 reasoning there. But I would say yes they had to.

22 Because if they allowed a law to go into effect before 23 they were done -- or they allowed the law to go into 24 effect pending the result of the certification that the 25 State is doing now, it would violate the referendum

1 right under the Constitution. So I would say that was a 2 compelled result and the correct one.

3 THE COURT: The whole time this case has been 4 going on, I've asked a lot of questions about 5 sufficiency, what the word sufficient means. Were you 6 aware that what was required for sufficiency is 7 different now than it was at the time that Carter was 8 written?

9 MR. HAWLEY: I'm sorry, can you ask that again?

10 THE COURT: Were you aware that the requirements 11 for sufficiency at the time Carter was written are 12 different --

13 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

14 THE COURT: -- than the time of today?

15 MR. HAWLEY: Yes. That's a question of detail
16 not a question of principle. So what is sufficient?

17 What legal? What is -- I don't think the timeliness has 18 changed. I believe that part was still the same. What 19 the Secretary has to do and what the contents of the 20 petition must be, that has changed. But the --

21 THE COURT: Why didn't you tell me that? The 22 whole time you've said this is insufficient, this 23 sufficient here. And this is how we're supposed to do 24 this. But in Carter was it self-certified before the 25 case came to be, which was very different than the

1 requirement in the Secretary to certified. I mean it's 2 a shock to me to hear today that the standard is 3 different as when arguing this whole time that I should 4 trust Carter and I should trust the sufficiency.

5 MR. HAWLEY: I would submit, Your Honor, that 6 those distensions don't under mind the wholly of Carter 7 and the reason we had been citing it, which is for the 8 broader principle not exactly what the Secretary has to 9 do or what the details were at the time of what a 10 petition had to be, but for the fact that it make -- 11 No 1. it make sense to presume the sufficiency of a 12 petition based on safeguards in the system, which we 13 have today. In fact, they've been even perhaps 14 magnified since then because the details have been 15 flushed out a little bit more. But more importantly, 16 the idea that it does -- that if you allow it to go into 17 effect before the referendum process, it will vitiate 18 that right.

19 THE COURT: But in Carter, it's out of Audrain
20 County, it's a dram shop case, and did the referenders, 21 did they self-certify the thing before the opinion came 22 out?

23 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

24 THE COURT: Was it sufficient because it was 25 self-certified -- had they not self-certified, would it

1 still be sufficient.

2 MR. HAWLEY: Under the law at the time, no, it
3 would not have been. So, yes, that's true. The -- that 4 process has changed. But Carter doesn't rest its 5 holding on the existence of that certification process.
6 It still makes a point of the prima facie presumption 7 makes sense given the way interplay --

8 THE COURT: But isn't it based upon on the 9 conjunctive of the legality, timeliness and sufficiency?
10 It didn't just say legality and timely. It's all based 11 upon, there's a coordinating conjunctions, right, and, 12 nor, form, or, so, but, yet.

13 MR. HAWLEY: Yeah.

14 THE COURT: And so they use the term "and" to say 15 all three things are required.

16 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

17 THE COURT: They didn't just say, well, if it's 18 just two of three or one of the three things is okay.
19 So why -- I understand the holding and you're saying
20 that it says X, Y and Z. But isn't X, Y and Z
21 predicated on all three this being required first?

22 MR. HAWLEY: I would say that if we take that 23 position and apply it as it is today without the 24 self-certification, we would run into an immediate 25 problem, which is that laws would not be allowed to be

1 suspended before the certification process. I mean, 2 that's essentially the way the --

3 THE COURT: I think we're talking past each 4 other.

5 MR. HAWLEY: I'm sorry.

6 THE COURT: So supposed it was -- I mean, it's a 7 stool, you're milking the cow and it's got three legs.
8 Right. You have legality. You have timely and you have 9 sufficient. So what if it wasn't legal? All right. So 10 what if -- what if a guy from Arkansas filed this case, 11 all right, would that be okay? Or what if it was 12 outside of 90 days, would that be okay? And so if it 13 requires all three things, why if it's sufficiency which 14 is required now of a certain number of voters deemed to 15 be certified, why is that okay to take off the stool 16 where the other two would not be? Does that make sense 17 to you?

18 MR. HAWLEY: It does make sense. And my response 19 to that, is we have to interpret it that way. We have 20 to presume the existence of the third leg of the stool, 21 because otherwise the rest of the referendum process
22 wouldn't fall apart.

23 THE COURT: But they didn't in Carter. It was 24 self-certified in Carter. I mean, wasn't that the 25 requirement, then, that it has to be certified? They

1 self-certified, so the three legs were met. And they 2 used the -- In mean, even the words are there or not.

3 I'm not trying to argue with you --

4 MR. HAWLEY: No. No. No. No. If we're talking 5 about participatory democracy in its peer form of back 6 and forth seems quite in keeping with that. So this is 7 wonderful. And I see the Court's point exactly. The 8 fact that self-certification happened then means that 9 sufficiency was established prior to suspension. That 10 is a detail in Carter. That was the reality of the 11 statutory scheme at the time.

12 But what we're trying to do is take the 13 reasoning of Carter and look at it now without that 14 self-certification. So we have two options what we 15 could do. The first would be to say that because 16 sufficiency is not self certified at the time of filing 17 that precondition is not established, therefore, a law 18 is not suspended upon the submission of petitions today.
19 That's the State's position.

20 But again, I don't believe that's a 21 constitutional position because it would allow 22 legislation to take effect only to later be suspended 23 and voted on and we know from other cases that the 24 referendum only exists if a law hasn't already gone into 25 effect. So it would -- it in theory, would deny the 1 people their ability to vote on something if the law

2 wasn't suspended.
3 So that's why when we look at Carter, we see the 4 word sufficiency. Looking at it under the statutory 5 scheme as it exists today, it suggests that the 6 sufficiency is confirmed by the Secretary's review. But 7 we have to presuppose it at the beginning. And if it's 8 not at that supposition was incorrect at the time of 9 filing, then the law is unsuspended as expeditiously as 10 possible.

11 But if we lose that presumption, if we lose that 12 stool, that leg of the stool, then we have bigger 13 problems about the fundamentals of the referendum right.

14 THE COURT: So Mr. Ellinger was talking about a 15 person to vote has to live in Missouri, be registered to 16 vote, I think it was, and not disenfranchised --

17 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

18 THE COURT: -- because of the three-legged stool.
19 So if you don't live in Missouri but register to vote
20 here and you've not been disenfranchised, is that okay?
21 Again, we're taking away one of the three things because 22 it's conjunctive not disconjunctive. So I'm trying to 23 figure out how to get it to -- get me to presuppose X, Y
24 and Z. But the law changed which required a timeline.

25 MR. HAWLEY: Yes.

1 THE COURT: The timeline became imbedded
2 substantive not procedural. Right. So I can't change
3 the timeline based upon that. But how do we -- I still 4 don't see how -- we're trying to say it's sufficient
5 when the law has changed to require sufficiency today
6 but it's not determined sufficient yet. Are you asking 7 me to determine that it's sufficient already?

8 MR. HAWLEY: No, I'm asking you to do exactly 9 what Secretary Kirkpatrick did in the 1980s, what 10 Secretary Ashcroft did ten years ago, which is how do we 11 look at -- how do we read Carter in a modern eye 12 post-Chapter 116? I think their position was the 13 correct one. The suspension happens because, if it 14 didn't happen, the law would take effect and we know 15 that it can't be. And then the sufficiency process is 16 confirmed.

17 And I realize that it -- if it's not a matter of 18 any one judge or any one court presupposing sufficiency, 19 it's the way the system has to be designed -- or it 20 doesn't have to be designed. It's the way the system 21 has to be implemented to give meaning to the other 22 provisions of the Constitution and the case law
23 interpreting it. Because if we didn't -- if sufficiency 24 wasn't established until months or in theory even years 25 later, because it's tied to the election date not the

1 date of the filing, we would have a significant 2 constitutional problem for a legislation that will 3 eventually be referred to the people and rejected for 4 months or years. And as we pointed out, with a 5 constitutional map, that's even a stronger problem.

6 So all of those three things have meaning.
7 Timeliness, sufficiency and I forget, whatever the third 8 leg of the stool, they all have meaning. But we have to 9 approach them slightly differently. But that does not 10 mean that Carter is bad law and it doesn't mean what 11 we're saying is inconsistent with Carter. It just how 12 it can realistically make the system work.

13 So what I was saying, what referred to the people
14 means, that's not a term defined in the Constitution.
15 It's not even clearly determine -- defined in the case 16 law. But it's something that we can figure out based on 17 the clues that exist and in the constitutional and 18 statutory text and the case law, and that's what we're 19 doing today.

20 Again, this is not a novel position. This is the 21 position that prior Secretaries have taken as a 22 necessity, because we have 116. And 116 is 23 constitutional, which means it doesn't undermine or 24 violate the right to referendum. That means that there 25 has to be something that happens before 90 days are up.

1 And that means we have to assume that those three 2 stools -- the three legs of the stools are satisfied, 3 and then the Secretary confirms or disconfirms that 4 later on. It's the only way of putting everything 5 together in a -- in a coherent whole without losing one 6 piece.

7 THE COURT: You think the right to statutory 8 interpretation is based upon assumptions of things that 9 are not in this statute of Constitution?

10 MR. HAWLEY: No, I think that the way we're 11 looking at it is we have to construe statutes in a way 12 to make them constitutional. And 116 is construed to 13 postpone the sufficiency determination in a way that 14 allows legislation to go into effect, even though it's 15 eventually subject to referendum, that would be 16 unconstitutional. And so when presented with this 17 problem, our solution, which we feel is both the 18 supported one, the correct one and the logical one, is 19 that you have to have automatic suspension based on a 20 preparation of those three precondition, because 21 otherwise the law would take effect.

22 So that's our way of looking at 116 and making it
23 constitutional. Because if it was interpreted in a way 24 that allows suspension -- the delayed suspension, we 25 have a big constitutional problem. And just -- sorry,

1 just real quick. On the points about injunction, that's 2 addressed in our brief. We satisfied that requirements
3 for mandatory injunction. I just wanted to mention 4 that.

5 And I want to end up by tying up to Intervenor's 6 counsel's suggestion that we let this play out. And 7 this gets to the point about kind of Carter and what 8 Carter stands for and why we are interpreting it in the 9 way that we believe is correct. We quote in our brief
10 pages 775 and 780 of Carter, describe a hypothetical 11 that they call grave -- grave of mementos, which is what 12 would happen if the delay -- in this process, what would 13 happen in that time if we allowed the Secretary's delay 14 of his, at that time, ministerial duties to vitiate the 15 referendum right.

16 And they said we cannot do that because it would 17 be -- that it would just be -- the right would be 18 nothing if the Secretary's delay of his responsibilities 19 would vitiate that right. But then they say, but 20 luckily, that's not the case before us today. That is 21 exactly the case before us today, is because what 22 happens when there's a delay in certification? Again, 23 the process has changed. The details have changed.
24 That part of it we can see. But this is the fundamental 25 problem that we have today, and Carter gives us the

1 answer. It's to assume -- it's to have an automatic 2 suspension under different details but the same reality.

3 And the way we need that, the way the reason we 4 can't let the process play out, I point the Court to 5 Plaintiffs' Exhibit 10, and this is quote from the 6 Secretary of State. "I'm going to do everything I can 7 to protect Governor Kehoe's Missouri First Map, the map
8 the General Assembly passed." Carter was afraid that a 9 secretary might just not get around to undertaking his 10 obligations in a timely manner. We have here evidence 11 that the Secretary has staked a position to do that.
12 And so that is -- that's the concern that we have.

13 And our -- the way to safeguard against that, 14 whether it's intentional or unintentional delay in the 15 certification process, is to apply the automatic pres-- 16 the automatic suspension based on presumption of 17 adequacy that the Secretary can then, again, confirm or 18 disconfirm, and that's also our way of making sure that 19 Chapter 116 is construed constitutional.

20 THE COURT: I've got one more question. I 21 apologize.

22 MR. HAWLEY: Please.

23 THE COURT: I don't know the answer to it and, if 24 you don't, I'm going to ask down the road.

25 But in Carter's time, was there a statutory time

1 limit for the Secretary to act?

2 MR. HAWLEY: I don't believe so. There was the 3 timing requirements of the referendum, but I'm not aware 4 of an outside deadline for the ministerial actions that 5 the Secretary was -- I confuse, I just -- that's a 6 long-winded way of saying I don't know.

7 THE COURT: I don't know either.

8 MR. HAWLEY: Okay. Well, I'd better sit down.
9 Thank you, Your Honor.

10 MR. CAPOZZI: We don't think there was a 11 deadline, Your Honor.

12 THE COURT: Anybody know? I don't have a clue.

13 MR. ELLINGER: I don't know, but I don't believe 14 there is.

15 THE COURT: Thank you. Mr. Capozzi?

16 MR. CAPOZZI: Thank you. Your Honor, I really 17 don't have that much to add, you know, this sort of 18 extra evidentiary allegation that the Secretary is 19 delaying anything. Again, the Secretary immediately 20 referred this to the local election officials. There's 21 no allegation the Secretary has departed from the 22 timeline. So with respect, we don't appreciate the 23 suggestion that those local election officials are 24 intentionally delaying this process. They're working 25 hard to go through the statutory process.

1 Only other thing we'll say, unless the Court has 2 questions, I'm happy that Plaintiffs have put the issue 3 front and center. They want the Court to strike down as 4 unconstitutional Section 116 as applied to this case.

5 It's a very serious request. They really haven't even 6 briefed that request. You know, they make the argument
7 in a footnote. They don't even engage with heavy 8 standard of review for striking down a law as 9 unconstitutional that we've had for, you know, over 10 three decades, and the State to guide the referendum 11 process. And so the State maintains Section 116 is 12 unconstitutional.

13 And unless the Court has questions, we will rest.

14 THE COURT: No questions at this time.

15 MR. CAPOZZI: Thank you, Your Honor.

16 THE COURT: Mr. Ellinger?

17 MR. ELLINGER: Judge, I don't want to try to milk 18 the cow on the three-legged stool over here, assuming 19 that there are legs. I'll sit down.

20 THE COURT: All right. Would you three come up 21 here real quick?

22 We're off, Jenny.
